Amid the complexities of our everyday life, we find ourselves viewing an infinite series of attitudes in composition. Of these we remember very few, and of these few, some cross the lens of the camera to be recorded and viewed again. Sometimes our photographic sample captures the subtle as well as the obvious. A fleeting glance can be preserved.

Look closely.

Here is a picture story of a distinctive institution in

IN 1248, King Henry III of England granted a charter to Oxford University. Nearly four hundred years later in 1636, the New England religious and educational leaders founded Harvard. On January 20, 1820, in the four-year-old state of Indiana, the legislature enacted a bill to provide for an institution of learning called the Indiana State Seminary. It was in this manner that the diffusion of the seven liberal arts and the university idea came from England to colonial America and finally to backwoods Indiana.

In 1818, Monroe County was organized and Bloomington was staked off. By 1820, a square was cleared, construction of a courthouse was begun and, with a population of over 200, the town was ready for a new state seminary. The county sent Dr. David H. Maxwell to lobby for a school. After the bill was passed — by a narrow margin — trustees were appointed to select its site in the uncut wilderness. Thus, Dr. Maxwell, whose efforts proved more valuable than then suspected, had his school. He may well be called the "Father of Indiana University."

The school became a reality in 1824, for in that year Professor Baynard H. Hall began teaching his class of ten students the traditional subjects: Latin and Greek. The following year saw a change of curriculum, since some of the pupils returned for further study. So, that year another Greek writer was studied. Six years later, the first commencement was held, and four men were turned out into the rough and unsettled Midwest, armed with a knowledge of the classics. In those days, each graduate was required to give a speech at the ceremonies. All foresaw a glowing future for the University, but they could not visualize such a thing as a graduating class of 3500 men and women in the peak year of 1950.

By 1827, the student body numbered twenty-one. The school met this increase by adding a mathematics professor, making a total faculty of two. The next year, the legislators changed the name of the seminary to Indiana College.

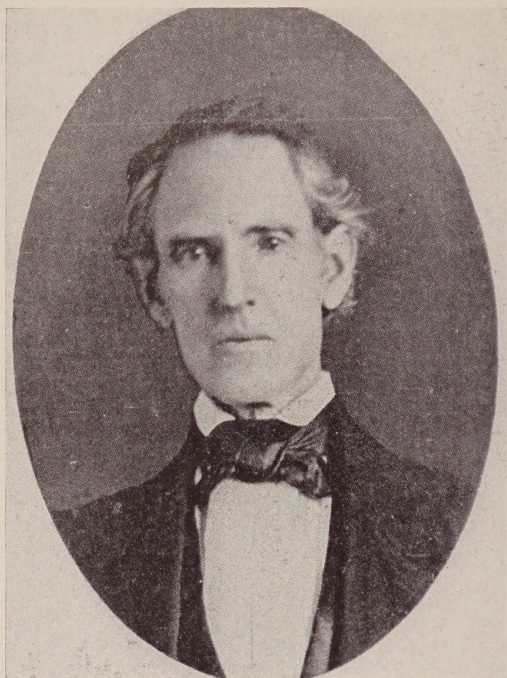

There was such an extensive curriculum in 1831 that a catalog had to be prepared for the 60 students who attended. During that year and those which followed, Dr. Andrew Wylie guided the school on a road of marked growth. This period was not without its setbacks, however, for during 1832, a war broke out on the campus. It seemed that a letter in Dr. Wylie's handwriting, with some indiscreet remarks about a professor named Varney, turned up in that gentleman's possession. Dr. Wylie denied Varney's accusations of having written it. The issue became so heated that the students and faculty were forced to take sides. Finally, in a moment of anger, Varney drew a knife on Dr. Wylie. The affair ended with Varney's dismissal.

In 1836, a new building was constructed, which was said to have resembled a New England cotton mill. Apparently, its lack of beauty did not hamper education or lessen enrollment, for two years later the college became Indiana University. At that time, it was granted the privilege of conferring degrees in law and in medicine, as well as in the arts. During the early '40's, a military department was added, but remained for only two years. It was permanently reinstated during the Civil War.

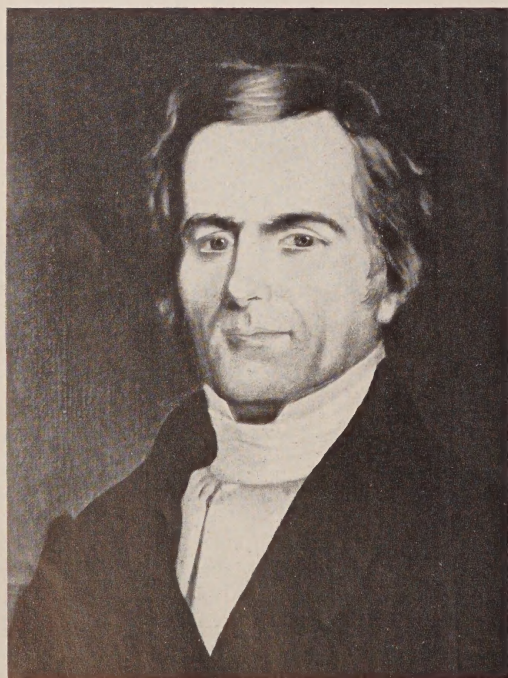

During the early 1850's, two literary and oratorical societies vied for top campus honors, but they soon had to compete with the fast-growing Greek-letter fraternities. Eventually they gave way to the secret Greeks altogether. In those days, rushing was of a more rugged description and was, for the most part, done between the railroad station and the campus. Some of the more eager souls went so far as to board the trains a few miles out of town to peddle their pledgeships.

The Civil War cut heavily into enrollment, but one redeeming feature of the period was the admission of women to the University in 1868. A few years later, sororities got started. The women followed the same general rushing procedure that the men did, but they carried things one step farther by showing off their new pledges. Each sorority would load its new girls onto a buckboard and drive them around past all the other houses.

About this time, athletics became important in the life of the University. Until then, school spirit had been channeled behind the debate team, which had been sent away to each debate after rallies and parades by the students. Sports events held on Jordan Field, however, gradually took over first place in student attention and shouting.

Some years later, Dr. William Lowe Bryan, a graduate of Indiana University, former instructor in Greek, associate professor of philosophy, and vice-president under Dr. Swain, became president.

Old University Building

On this land, the new University was to be built. With a $50,000 donation from Monroe County, and an additional $20,000 insurance money, work on the present-day Indiana University began. On June 10, 1834, the first cornerstone was laid — for Wylie Hall.

Not until Dr. David Starr Jordan became president of the University in 1885, did Indiana begin to assume its present form. Under Jordan, I.U. was transformed into an institution of research and individual work. The graduate school began to grow, younger men were taken on as faculty members, and the University was popularized throughout the state high schools. Because of this, the enrollment increased rapidly, and the faculty and facilities expanded. After he left, Dr. Jordan received much praise for his improvements at I.U., but he always said that the one memorial that he appreciated the most was the renaming of Spanker's Branch in his honor.

In 1875, the University took a definite path under the direction of Dr. Lemuel Moss. Relations between the Indiana Medical College and the University were severed, and the Law School was discontinued. Special lectures by leading scholars were introduced, and, for the first time, courses leading to the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Bachelor of Letters were created. Traditional education was expanded at the expense of professional education.

It was during this era that the University moved from the site of Bloomington High School to its present location. In 1883, a severe fire totally destroyed the 13,000-volume library, the museum, and most of the science department. The question of rebuilding on the old site then arose. After considerable deliberation, the Board of Trustees decided to purchase a tract of land known as Dunn's Woods.

Wylie Hall

Dr. Bryan observed that most of the graduates of the University were prepared for nothing but teaching upon graduation, and he maintained that the field of education could not absorb all these people. His data showed that most graduates took up some profession other than that for which they had studied, so he began what he called his "bread studies"—training for a specific profession. He also broadened the liberal arts courses. It was under Bryan that the foundation was laid for I.U.'s further expansion.

Kirkwood Hall

Men's Gym

Upon Bryan's resignation, Dr. Herman B Wells and Ward Biddle took the reins of administration as president and treasurer, respectively. Through their efforts, the Auditorium was built and the school began its eastward expansion. Their groundwork enabled I.U. to accommodate the postwar veteran enrollment. In short, this was the team that provided for the growth into today's University.

The structures ...

Campus View Around 1905

Indiana University Campus in 1951

These are the structures of the University. They are the piles of limestone and the product of labor that make up the face of the campus. It took a long time, plenty of sweat, and a lot of limestone to put those buildings here. When viewed together, they tell the complete story of I.U. because each was built to represent the style of the time. There is beauty and strength in the lines and angles of the buildings, and there is a peaceful blending of the old and new designs.

To each person every building is a reminder of a certain incident. To all they are reminders that the campus is a living thing and is forever changing. A casual look around will show that it is still evolving and growing. This campus has changed a lot since coming out to the east side of town — so much so, in fact, that old man Dunn would hardly recognize his own land.

Dunn Family Burial Plot

Centennial Oak

He gave the land . . .

The Dunn family was one of the early families of Bloomington, and they owned all the land within the boundaries of Tenth, Indiana, Third, and Jordan. Mr. Dunn's house stood where the gym now stands. Thinking that someday the University might want to expand east, he willed all his land to the school. However, when the city tried to tax him for this land, he became so angry that he gave the land to Purdue and moved to Bedford.

Dunn had, nevertheless, dedicated the family cemetery to the people buried there and to God. So, when the University finally bought the land, it was undisturbed.

In a living University, changes leave behind a great many things. Most of these changes have come in the form of new construction and new ideas. For many years after the acquisition of Dunn's land new buildings and new methods came into being slowly. I.U.'s growth plodded along. Then in the middle 1930's Ward G. Biddle moved up from the management of the Bookstore to Comptroller of the University. He set out to modernize and enlarge the school, and the team of Wells and Biddle did just that. Their driving efforts saw the construction of the buildings to the east of Forrest Place and the University's enlargement into a cosmopolitan center of learning.

As I.U. surged northeastward in its expansion, much of the old was put aside. Old equipment was replaced, and antiquated ideas were eliminated. They were not destroyed; they were merely stored out of the way. In the warehouse and in the museum the relics of the University were placed for renovation, in some cases, but mostly as memorials to the days when I.U. was just a small country college.

Part of the whole...

A great many people see very little of this campus. They come here, look around briefly, and leave with only a few distinct impressions. Consequently, massive features are the only memories they take with them.

Freshmen see the most, but they miss the correct perspective. They recognize the complicated patterns of the steel and masonry. Yet, for all the details that they see, they fail to understand the intricate pattern as part of the whole picture of the University.

Even if the freshmen see only the details, they are far happier than those who see nothing. It is amazing that so few see each mound of limestone as a structure to raise the I.U. monogram up where it will be seen and known by all.

...in behalf of society

Yet while many people are unaware of the significance of most of the places, they all realize the benefits of the Union. At one time or another everyone has had occasion to appreciate it. All people acknowledge the importance and seriousness of the work being done in the Medical Building. Not a person passes it without feeling a little shiver of awe and glancing quickly to reassure himself that the grim work being done inside is in behalf of society.

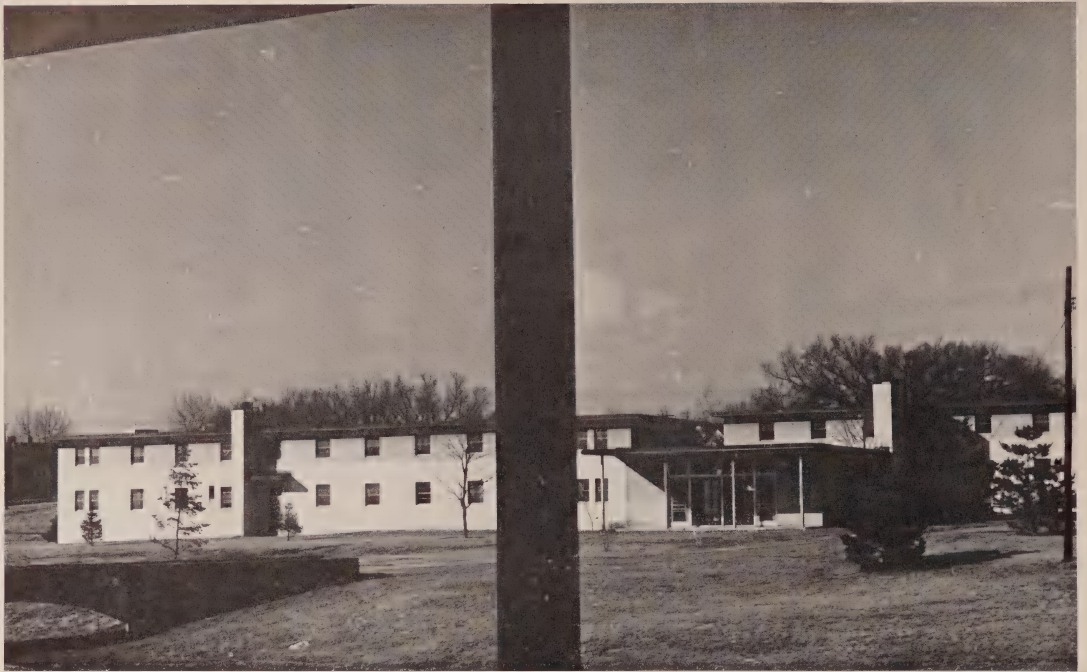

Auditorium

It is the little things that are remembered. Not many recall particularly that the Auditorium was under construction in 1940, but each person remembers the warm, pleasant feeling that he had after having seen a good program. Likewise, few know that there is a cyclotron in Swain Hall, but plenty of students remember that the only math they got from trig class was the phone numbers of the pretty girls who sat in the front row.

...one's own tradition

Students all have their own associations with the various buildings and retreats on campus. It brings a chuckle to think of all the crazy signs and souvenirs posted on the bulletin boards. When they remember the grating sound of the alarm clock at the crack of dawn after having studied into the small hours of the morning, twelve thousand strangers have a common tie. Everyone recalls noticing the distant nonsensical pattern of the lighted dorm windows late at night. The loud boress with pals after a date still gets a laugh. Things like these are what make up one's own tradition.

The school has expanded...

Like the students who come here, the campus itself is a living thing. Growth has been the most notable trait of its vigorous life. New additions — land and buildings — are always increasing the size of the University. On all sides the sights and sounds of construction forecast further enlargement. In the past few years there has sprung up a tremendous number of new buildings, from the temporary trailer courts to the vast and comfortable Men's Quad. Relentlessly, the school has expanded northeastward.

With new landmarks being constructed all the time, the face of the campus is changing rapidly. The growing University reaches out for its friends. New people come to take the places of the old, and the new features become a part of the traditional. But in the memories of the old and the new, these landmarks remain as the unifying spirit which brings together all those who have attended Indiana University.

... the class of '54

He and 2200 others became the class of '54. The administration turned out full force to cope with his problems. But the whole program merely confused him. He was overwhelmed by sincere but ineffectual welcomes. He was bewildered by his counselor's references to hours and credit points. Why take French when all you want to do is major in psychology?

He walked and he memorized. He went to meetings and he took tests. He learned that orientation could be exhausting.

... to seem green

He signed and printed his name eleven times. Central Housing, the News Bureau, the churches . . . they all wanted to know about him.

He met his classmates. He engaged in tentative conversations with them. He felt shy when talking to strangers, but he felt relieved at finding someone in the same fix as he. He seemed brave when talking to other newcomers. He upheld his blasé expression in the face of all surprises. Anything was better than to seem green.

His curiosity was endless. He eyed everything with interest. His senses were sharpened, his observations keener. The subtle was as important to him as the apparent.

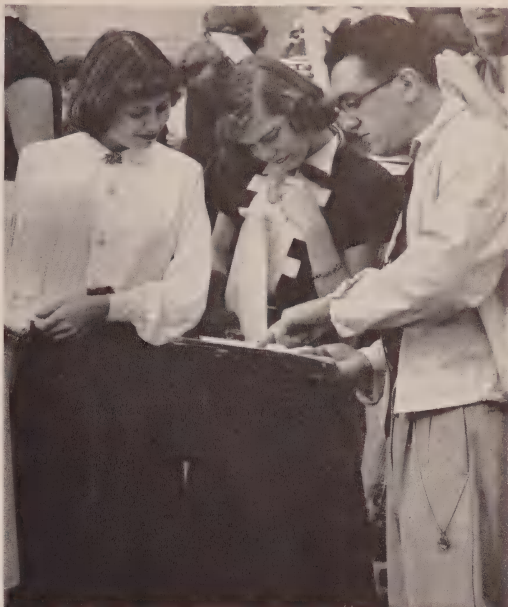

He didn't know his way around campus, but hesitated to ask the upperclassmen for information. He had an obligation to forego the use of the map in his orientation booklet. As far as he could, he used the smokestack on the power plant for a compass.

... "oh, look!"

He was always pleased to discover something new, particularly some small and seemingly insignificant detail, which seemed distinctly part of the University. He would have been shocked if he knew that his face had assumed a constant expression of "oh, look!"

Sixteen extra doctors . . .

Every hour, one hundred just like him were examined in the infirmary. Sixteen extra doctors, several gross of depressors, and the infirmary's whole staff of employees was needed for his class. His ears were probed with lights. His arm was prodded with needles. His reactions ranged from bored amusement on the part of the men to unfounded dread on the part of the women.

How small can you feel?

The size of the fieldhouse vs. the size of a freshman. Or, to use a college term he had just learned: how small can you feel? The constant shifting of roles, from that of an adult to that of an adolescent, was beginning to tell. His feeling of detachment increased. Becoming philosophical, he set up another phrase: "me" vs. 12,000 students.

That slight line . . .

The upperclassmen were friendly, but, let's face it, he just didn't know the same people. There was very little chance for a meeting of the minds.

He was quick to respond to the nonchalance of those who had been around for a while, and tried to imitate it. But as yet he couldn't recognize that slight line between the casualness of familiarity and the assumed casualness of the uninitiated. His own feeling of inadequacy enlarged the gap between him and the "authorities," the term including everyone from President Wells to the guy who punched meal tickets. Their slightest attention could make him feel completely out of line.

Although the veteran enrollment dropped 2000, his class helped to make up the deficit.

An enthusiasm . . .

At the end of the week the campus finally became a familiar thing. Gradually the sharp edges of observation had dulled . . . And in spite of the strangeness, or perhaps because of it, his class came up with an enthusiasm unequaled by the rest of the school.

Three days a week . . .

At 8:30, three days a week, Mr. Driver lectures to one hundred and twenty-five students of cultural anthropology. The students shake their pens and open their notebooks. At half past, Mr. Driver enters, pins a map above the blackboard, and leisurely begins to talk.

Smoothly, slowly, sure of himself, Mr. Driver speaks of marriage customs, comparative mores, family organization. Hitting a snag, he pauses, scratches his nose, rubs the back of his head. Cautiously, he begins again. Becoming more certain, he proceeds more confidently.

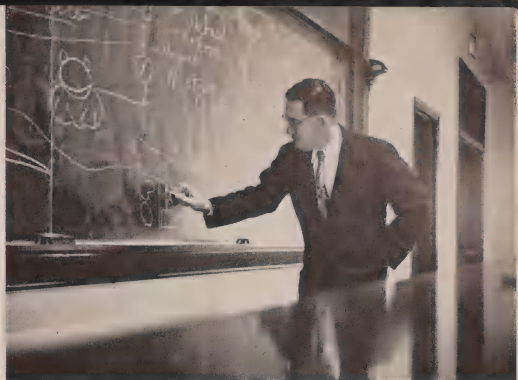

The students, who have been taking careful notes, have also found the time to keep an eye on their watches. Finally notebooks click shut, coats begin to rustle. As leisurely as he started, Mr. Driver concludes the period.

From Kalamazoo to you...

In Chemistry 209, 10:30 Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays is a lecture for two hundred and fifty students taking Zoology, Z103. On the Wednesday before Christmas the room is filled to capacity and more. People stand in the back of the room, in the aisles, in the doorway. Five hundred students suddenly develop an intense interest in matters zoological. And it's time for Dr. Breneman's Christmas lecture.

Dr. B., smiling from ear to flaring ear, stands behind the black-topped desk. The atmosphere is a mixture of vaudeville and education. The students remember that they are, after all, in a lecture hall, and refrain from applauding. But the effort is almost conscious.

Having explained that an inch of space is equal to two hundred years of time on the road from Kalamazoo to Bloomington, Dr. Breneman starts the evolutionary journey.

The line of time ...

Moving south from the flat, dry terrain at Kalamazoo, Dr. Breneman describes the floods and large bodies of water in northern Indiana. The Goshen natives laugh when they learn that sponges were first seen in their home town; Shortridge graduates are proud that jellyfish made their first appearance in front of their alma mater. Everyone appreciates the fact that the first man-like creature put in his appearance at the Bloomington courthouse, under the sign of the fish called a sucker, and that an improved but still backward variety of the same breed was first seen in front of Nick's Old English Hut.

The line of time comes straight through the window of the room and ends, at the present, on the desk in front of Dr. Breneman. The first Christmas occurs about ten inches from the top of the desk. In a space too small to measure, radio, automobiles, aeroplanes, and atom bombs make their advent. Coiled under the desk is an indefinite length of the rest of time. The bungling experimentation of man has had a short history; his potentialities are limitless.

Merry Christmas!

... A Center of Defense

Sept. 15 — The 7th Division and the 1st Marine division landed at Inchon after preliminary bombardment by U.N. naval units, which included the battleship Missouri. At Inchon, resistance was light.

While Marine elements moved toward Seoul, army units seized Kimp'o airdrome, about twelve miles northwest of Seoul on the Hon River. Marine units were temporarily halted by sharp enemy rear-guard action. Re-forming, the Marines drove into the city, and officially captured it after several hours of hard street fighting.

The amount of research at Indiana University has shown a steady increase. The physics department, with the assistance of Dr. Langer and the cyclotron, is studying the atom. The chemistry department is doing research on drugs for the future. The Slavic studies department has expanded from a one-man department to one with three times as many professors and a wide variety of courses.

Government subsidies have also increased. The personnel of the military department grows every year. Indiana University has become a center of defense research.

... harrowing days

Eight days make up one final week, harrowing days producing haggard students. Finals are conducted on the principle that one semester's work plus one student equals two hours' worth of blue book space. The application of this principle creates a situation — that situation is final week.

Consider the normal student during final week. He is standing under a halo of glowing good intentions. He resolutely goes over his notes, reads the text, submits the boy who took the course last semester to the third degree, plays bridge, laughs a doomed man's laugh, and smokes. As the inevitable hour approaches, he arms himself with his motto, "If I don't know it now, I never will," pulls the last drag out of his cigarette and saunters to the exam.

... the student writes

Then, the writing starts. In a few minutes the facts begin to come to mind, and after a vacant look at the ceiling, they arrange themselves in some sort of order. Having remembered, the student writes—as fast as he can.

The proctor coughs or someone gets up to walk out. It breaks the chain of thought. So he looks up, stretches, gazes around, and then muses. Where was he? He cannot recall. He gets shaky and bites his fingertips. In a few minutes he remembers and writes on at top speed.

Sometime after the first hour of a two-hour final, the proctor posts the time on the blackboard. Shortly afterward, the first groups of people begin to leave the room. That starts the stampede to finish. Pens scratch along faster than ever. At last, it is ended.

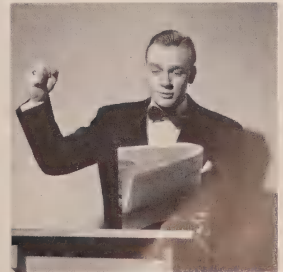

Years ago, before the coming of organized athletics, student spirit was centered around the debate team. That was the team the University sent away with cheers and rallies. After athletic teams were organized, student spirit was transferred to sports. Debating became a rather unknown activity.

However, the debaters continued to maintain their rich tradition. Over the years, discussing a wide variety of serious questions, they won honors in competition with some of the outstanding teams in the nation. This year the unheralded debate team won top honors in the western conference Debating League, thus giving a conference title to an I.U. team.

... They Won Honors

... the autumn ritual

In the fall there is a feeling of football. That feeling is the color of the crowd, the noise at the games, and the smooth performance of the team. It is a spirit of college and it grips everyone. All are affected by it and want to be. Not to be affected would mean being left out of college. Going to the games and being a part of them is the autumn ritual.

The pre-college group goes to the games because it is a change to be in the collegiate atmosphere. As they follow the game, they learn the accepted patterns of their "elders." However, the small-fry, who go with their parents, are interested only in exploring the new situation.

The alums come back to see the games so they can have a reason to play college again. While in many cases they earnestly return to see football, they usually come well prepared for a party. They and their stories are welcomed by the undergrads.

For various reasons the crowd pours into the stadium — to see football.

We really don't worry . . .

"We really don't worry much about getting hurt. I think everyone worries more about a replacement. Sometimes it seems like they lay for certain boys, but usually they can take care of themselves. I'll tell you, I think the boys are more concerned about just getting into the game."

Coach Leahy

his team is winning...

Sixty minutes of football is a pretty exciting time for a coach. During that time he worries about the outcome — no matter how calm he may seem. If his team is winning, he is worried about how long it is taking for the clock to run out and the game to end. Should he be losing, he is desperate, tries anything to pull a victory out of the fire, and for him, time is running out all too fast.

When the game is over, the loss is hard to take. The losing coach's effort has been for nothing and he is exhausted. Happily, the winning coach leaves on the shoulders of his team. For him, it has been a good day.

Coach Leahy

... victory smiles

Regardless of the outcome of the game, there is some form of aftermath. Victory calls for one kind of response; defeat brings out another pattern of actions. During the football season, there are plenty of chances to exhibit both responses.

Winning brings on the big victory smiles. There is that warm, confident feeling of having had a successful day. The men do not feel so tired. Even the congratulations of the fair-weather fans are bearable. The big grins do not last long, but the pleasant sensation lasts for quite a while.

An unexpected victory brings on a mixture of expressions. While everyone is happy about the upset, no one is exactly sure of what to do. There is no pattern of what to do in such cases. If the win had been expected, the victory parades would start immediately after the game. That has been done before, and all know it. With an unexpected win, everyone just waits for someone else to do something. Eventually there is a celebration and, since no one really knows what will happen, everyone turns out. With the victory duly observed, all settle down until the following weekend and the game.

... the Commons habitué

Coffee in the Commons is part of the role behavior of every student. He stands in the same line, sits at the same table with the same people between classes, after classes, for library breaks. The conversation has run in the same lines for so long and the private jokes have been made so many times that a rapport is established between him and his colleagues. Their long association defies a stranger to understand their swift subtleties.

And yet, to the Commons habitué, every minute spent there is different. Maybe he sits with the big party crowd . . . the ones who talk about what Joe said when he convulsed everyone, and how the car broke down fifteen miles from town. Or maybe he sits with the boys who "get things done around this place" . . . the ones who cook up the big political deals, win and lose elections without moving from the table. Or maybe he is one of the "intellectuals" . . . the ones who consider themselves just a little above the ordinary run, and are, in turn, looked on as a slightly screwy bunch.

... a little horseplay

Perhaps it seems ridiculous to pigeon-hole Commons behavior. Perhaps it is. It could be mere habit, a set of reflexes which start the muscles in motion toward the Commons when the bell rings. It could be the old herd instinct showing, the social animal seeking his own breed. It could be the pleasantest and easiest way to kill time, a chance to have a cup of coffee, engage in a little horseplay, just sit and chat.

Underlyin

In the morning, when the room is filled with ten o'clock scholars and coffee club members, conversation is subdued and voices are muted. Strangely enough, the music on the juke box in the background is fast, bright, and hot. In the afternoon, when the music is dreamy, the talk is swift and the laughter shrill. And in the evening, the juke box is silent and the conversation personal.

The conversation itself can be categorized. Football and basketball prevail in their season. The price of coffee was a problem at one time. Practically every day there is a questionnaire to be filled out.

the whole . . .

Underlying the whole pattern is the world situation . . . trite words with a personal meaning. The talk of the "party boys" is punctuated with not-so-casual wisecracks about the draft. The politicians discuss the same subject, perhaps more gravely. The intellectuals use abstract terms and mean the same thing. To the strains of "Saturday Night Fish Fry," the conversation weaves around the one subject of Korea and the army.

...the great American pastime

At twenty after every hour, people begin wandering up and down the aisles, selecting those whom they can and can't sit with. The straggler enters, looking enthusiastic. If he can't find his "group" he becomes aware that he is standing while everyone else is sitting, that he is sitting alone while everyone else is talking.

Entwined with the conversation is the great American pastime: romance. Dialogue is enhanced by coy glances and experimental leers. Even in the middle of deep discussion, the covert examination of the opposite sex continues. Innocent assignations are given away by cautious affection.

The Commons is a theatre . . . the Commons is a clearing house . . . the Commons is a village fair. It is certainly more than a handful of Indiana University students and an urn full of coffee. Maybe it's only a mammoth collection of trivia . . . maybe trivia is important.

... They Call It Rush Week

They call it rush week, but it's more than a seven-day period during which twenty-one sororities systematically increase their numbers. It's a social fourth dimension. It's a one-hundred-and-eighty-hour state of mind. It's an Amazonian selective service. It happens only once a year.

... A Social Fourth Dimension

Parties followed parties, smiles appeared on top of smiles, skits outdid all former skits, and hellos and goodbyes grew increasingly fervent as each rushing day went by. Rushees looked over houses, houses looked over rushees, and Pan-Hell kept a watchful eye looking over everybody.

Then it was over. Best feet, charm, and sophistication were put back into the filing cabinet until next year, while the rushees changed into pledges and the rushers became actives . . . They call it rush week.

... A Day Full of Business

Some students work. Nearly two thousand of them are employees as well as students. Theirs are not the faces that are seen leaning over the cokes in the Commons, because they go to classes and then to work. Their double load leaves them little time for outside activities; they find that class hours and working hours add up to a day full of business.

One journalism major writes for the Daily Student in the evening, for scholastic credit, then reports to the Printing Plant in the morning to tear apart the previous day's Student, including his own writing, for financial credit. To him, his job is a scholarship. Without it he would not be here.

Through the Dean of Students' Office and its student employment service, the Union Building and the Halls of Residence are staffed with waiters, the Library obtains workers, and scholars hire typists. They work not only for the university and for themselves, but for the rest of the 14,000.

... Serve the School

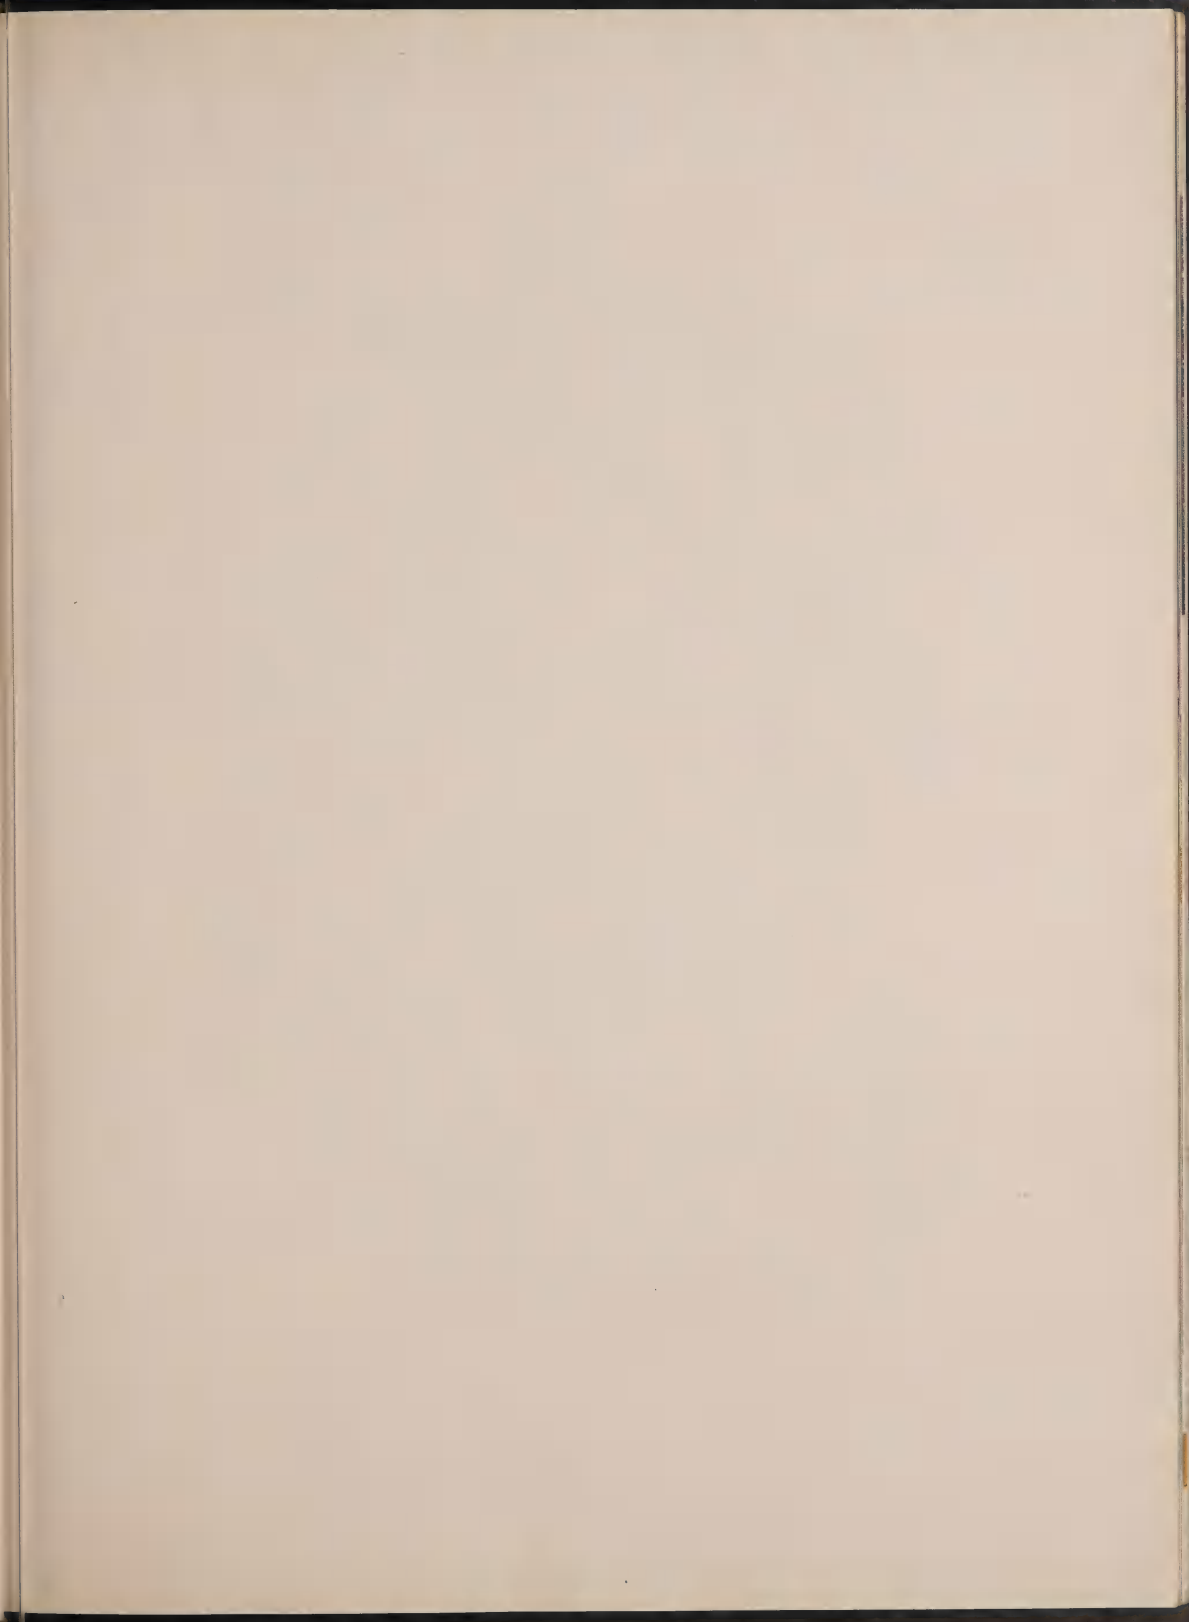

These students earn their living while they are learning to earn their living. A medical student studies his future profession in the Med Building into which he has dragged cadavers, where he has fed experimental rats and prepared specimens for laboratory use. His college education is not collegiate, but it is an education of experience.

Jobs necessary to the smooth running of the university are filled by students who serve the school so they may use the services the school has to offer them. These students work.

For over a century and a half, election to Phi Beta Kappa has been a recognition of intellectual capacities well employed, especially in the acquiring of an education in the liberal arts and sciences. Because of the remarkably high proportion of famous names on the roll of Phi Beta Kappa, admission to its ranks may reasonably be held to indicate potentialities of further distinction.

Phi Beta Kappa was founded on December 5, 1776, at William and Mary College. It was the first Greek-letter society. Gamma of Indiana was founded in 1911, and has a living membership of 1,325. Election of students as members is held in the spring and fall. The highest ten percent of the candidates for the A.B. degree who have completed at least two full years of residence at I.U. above the freshman level are eligible for election.

When the century was still young, on February 15, 1908, Epsilon chapter of Alpha Chi Sigma was founded at Indiana University. The purpose of the organization was to advance the science and profession of chemistry, and to aid individual members to attain their goals in that field. The fraternity is a collegiate branch of the professional fraternity, and collegiate members become professional members after graduation.

Requirements for membership are sophomore class standing and the desire to make a career in the field of chemistry. The social activities this year included a smoker, two banquets, one in honor of the new initiates, and a picnic. Professionally, the chapter works actively with the chemistry department in furthering the safety program of the department.

The most important plans for the future of Alpha Chi Sigma are those which include the establishment of a house on campus for members, thus combining the fraternal and professional bond in one ideal: the furthering of chemical science.

Besides excelling in their round-the-clock work in journalism, the members of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity for men, found time again this year to present the fraternity's traditional and popular campus "headliners."

In the fall S.D.X. had its Blanket Hop, which was attended by a capacity throng of dancers. In keeping with the fraternity's annual practice, I-Blankets were presented to graduating lettermen at the dance. Another high spot in S.D.X.'s agenda of activities was the Gridiron Banquet in the spring. Strictly a male gathering, the banquet features a well-known speaker each year, as well as the presentation of numerous awards and the performance of "razz" skits. The S.D.X. men devoted much of their time to publishing the Crimson Bull, the campus humor magazine. And to keep abreast of new developments, both in journalism and within the national organization of S.D.X., the local chapter sent delegates to the National Convention of Sigma Delta Chi at Miami, Florida.

Theta Sigma Phi, national professional honorary for women in journalism, sponsored the two largest banquets for women on campus during the school year, participated in activities of the department of journalism, and tried to promote interest in journalism on campus.

With quotes and misquotes from Shakespeare, the ladies of the press poked fun at I.U. politics and personalities at their annual Razz Banquet in January. In April, Theta Sigs celebrated Matrix Milestones Month by sponsoring Matrix Table and preparing displays promoting journalism. At Matrix, prominent women in professional journalism addressed campus and town women.

The students with straw hats and editing pencils took time out from campus journalism to help sponsor two mixers for journalism majors and two Swing-In, Swing-Out parties, when Daily Student staff changes were announced and awards presented. Professional women in journalism spoke to the Theta Sigs at meetings.

Theta Sigma Phi awarded its annual scholarship, the ring to the "Unsung Senior" woman, and the award to the outstanding senior woman in journalism at Matrix Table.

White rubber rats hanging about their necks and posters saying, "I'm not crazy. I'm a Psi Chi pledge" are the beginning ornaments of members of the club of psychology majors and minors. Twice monthly these fellow delvers-into-human-behavior met to further their knowledge in the field.

During the year, speakers from the department talked to them on specialized fields. For instance, Dr. Hardtke, an I.U. psychiatrist, told of the service of the psychiatric department here on campus. Also movies were shown on such subjects as hypnosis and neurosis on the white rats.

Shifting from studying human behavior to becoming excellent examples of normal behavior, the club enjoyed a steak fry in the spring.

F Company, Second Regiment, of Scabbard and Blade is composed of a limited number of men who are chosen from the advanced classes of the Reserve Officers Training Corps on the basis of character and proficiency in military science and tactics. The aims of the organization include raising the standard of military training in American Universities, bringing about class cooperation between military departments, fostering the essential qualities of good and efficient officers, and promoting fellowship among the cadet officers. In recognition of outstanding R.O.T.C. cadets, each year awards are given to the best drill cadet, the top rifle marksman, and the Corps's top military student.

This year the Company began its activities by answering the grid challenge of the Arnold Air Society. Later in the fall the "Blades" and the "Airmen" cooperated in a meeting with Dr. Ginsberg, where an evening was spent studying the military doctrines of the Soviet Union. The addition of a new headquarters which was located in a quonset hut, adjacent to the Science Building, facilitated the program of the Company.

The Slavic Club of Indiana University supplements the work of the Department of Slavic Studies, particularly by sponsoring talks by authorities in the field on topics of Slavic interest and in sponsoring exhibits, films, and dramatic productions of Slavic cultural and artistic interest. Thus the club contributes toward the double goal of bringing to students of non-Slavic descent the opportunity of coming to understand the culture of the Slavic peoples, and to students of Slavic descent the opportunity to become better acquainted with their own cultural heritage.

The club was organized in 1947, under the leadership of Prof. Michael Ginsburg, chairman of the Department of Slavic Studies. This year the faculty sponsor was Dr. J. T. Shaw.

One activity of particular interest this year was a weekly informal meeting of club members, to sing folk songs of the various Slavic peoples, in the original languages, including Russian, Slovak, Czech, Serbian, and Polish. High points of the regular club meetings were a program commemorating the centennial of the death of the great Polish composer Chopin and a report by Dr. Ginsburg on his observations during a visit to Yugoslavia in the summer of 1950.

The Home Economics Club at Indiana University is affiliated with the American Home Economics Association. Membership in this organization is open to any girl interested in home economics.

The purposes of this organization are to interpret the functions of home economics, to provide an opportunity for fellowship among home economics students, and to provide for professional development and work for the improved status of the home.

Meetings on different topics of interest are held once a month. Along with monthly meetings, several social events are held during the year. One of the main social events is the annual Eye Opener Breakfast. At this event members of the organization present a style show for freshman women. At the style show, models showed what the typical outfits are for different occasions on campus.

Many guest speakers are invited to lecture at the meetings. Prominent women who spoke at meetings this year were, Mrs. Beth Bailey McLean, Director of Home Economics for Swift and Company, who spoke on "Careers Open to Home Economics Majors" and Dr. Dorothy Lyle, of the National Institute of Cleaners and Dyers who spoke on "Dry Cleaning."

Alpha Kappa Psi, oldest professional business fraternity, originated at New York University in 1904. The Beta Gamma Chapter at I.U. was founded in 1927 and has been an active organization in the School of Business since that date. This international fraternity strives to promote leadership in the field of business. The aims of the fraternity are to further the individual welfare of its members; to foster scientific research in the fields of commerce, accounts, and finance; to educate the public to appreciate and demand higher ideals, therein; and to promote and advance in institutions of college rank, courses leading to degrees in the business field.

The local chapter combines social activities with its business aims. It annually holds a dance and several banquets, and each year undertakes a practical business project.

Delta Sigma Pi, business and commerce fraternity, was organized to foster the study of business in universities, to encourage scholarship, and to further the association of students for their mutual advancement through research and practice.

This year the organization sponsored a unique stock market contest in which the members made transactions through the Delta Sig Exchange. At the regular meetings, informative movies and outstanding speakers provided the educational program. To further their scholastic goals, the Delta Sigs awarded a scholarship key to the graduating senior who held the highest four-year scholastic record in the School of Business.

Outstanding on the Delta Sig social calendar this year were the selection of the girl for Rose of Delta Sig, and the annual dance. Other social activities included the initiation banquet, smokers, and ball games. In the future the Delta Sigs have hopes of securing a chapter house or a lodge.

The Collegiate Chamber of Commerce, which was formed in 1939 by the students of the business school, acts as a coordinator between the clubs and organizations in the school.

Many services were performed by the C.C. of C. during the year. The "Squeak Box," located in the B. & E., gives the students a chance to voice their complaints and suggestions. To keep the display windows and bulletin boards in the lobby up to date is the responsibility of the Chamber of Commerce. Each week a "Man or Woman of the Week" is selected from one of the business departments for outstanding scholastic ability and participation in campus activities. The Collegiate Chamber helped strengthen faculty-student relationships by sponsoring faculty coffee hours in the B. & E. basement.

Membership in the C.C. of C. is open to all students in the business school. The organization is headed by a board of directors consisting of twelve members. This year the office of the board was moved from its location in the B. & E. basement to larger quarters in South Hoosier Hall. A small study room and library are maintained in their new office.

The purposes of the Insurance Club are to further interests in the students of insurance as a career, promote teacher and student relations with suggestions by the students on improvement of courses taught, and having speakers to show their experience in the field of insurance.

Any major in insurance, or any person exceptionally interested in insurance, may be a member of this club, with the exception of freshmen.

During the year the main object of the Insurance Club was to have speakers at its meetings. These men are chosen for their different fields, ranging from life to general insurance. They come to show the advantages of the insurance business and training programs of their various companies. Not only are the speakers from certain companies, but they are, also, from different localities. Research workers, too, are asked to speak. The Insurance Club had a picnic in May.

The Marketing Club is now one of the largest clubs in the School of Business. It has increased in size until now the total membership approaches nearly ninety. To increase cooperation and interest among students of Marketing at Indiana University is the primary purpose of the Marketing Club.

During the year the Marketing Club has sponsored many programs which have featured some of the most well-known men in the various fields of marketing. The members have taken a very active part in these programs and much valuable information and guidance have been forthcoming. The club strives in many ways to help and assist the student to understand the marketing principles as they are practiced and applied in the field today. Discussions and round-table talks have encouraged student participation in actual analysis of marketing problems.

Plans are being made for the expansion of the Marketing Club's activities. With an eye for the future the club hopes that its programs will continue to benefit the students of marketing by giving them a practical outlook and to bring still greater benefits and opportunities to its members.

Established in 1937, the Accounting Club offers membership to juniors, seniors and post-graduate students in accounting. Its primary purpose is to provide for those interested students an opportunity to become better acquainted with outstanding men in accounting, and to acquire a broader knowledge of the field.

At its meetings during the first semester, the Accounting Club presented representatives from several companies, who spoke on topics pertinent to accounting. It was believed that meeting these men would be of value to students looking for jobs. The second semester provided the members with the opportunity of visiting industries on field trips to view the operations of accounting in those industries. A banquet for all accounting students and faculty members brought the year's activities to a successful finish.

The future of the Accounting Club will be based upon its most important goal—to bring still greater benefits and opportunities to its members.

The Indiana University chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management, a national professional organization for management people in industry, government and education, grew out of a student organization founded in the School of Business in 1940 and formerly known as the Management Club.

With the cooperation of the parent chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management in Indianapolis and other industrial groups, the organization has brought to the university campus outstanding representatives from the business and professional fields and from the ranks of organized labor. These guests have appeared at bi-monthly meetings, speaking individually or in panel discussion on current problems and programs within the areas of production and personnel management.

Yearly arrangements for short internships in Indiana's leading industrial concerns have been sponsored by the group, in addition to special projects undertaken by members within the School of Business at Indiana University.

Pi Lambda Theta is the national education honor association for women. Its members include undergraduates, graduate students, and faculty; consequently, the monthly meetings of this organization are more varied, interesting and colorful than most organizations on Indiana University's campus. Several of its members have written books pertaining to the field of education.

Each semester and during the summer session, Pi Lambda Theta's chosen members are initiated. Following the ceremonies, a banquet is traditional. Once a year, a scholarship award is presented to the outstanding woman student, and twice a year, prominent educators are brought to the campus to speak under the auspices of this organization.

The purposes of the group are to seek and maintain the highest standards of scholarship and professional preparation, to work actively to further the cause of democratic education, to encourage intercultural understanding, to strive for a clear understanding of local, state, national, and international problems and to stimulate active participation in their solution, and to encourage graduate work.

This organization, also known as the R.N. Club, was organized in 1937. Since that time it has striven to further both social and professional aspects on the campus. In order to become a member of this club, it is necessary to be a graduate nurse.

Under its objective of instigating and promoting projects which increase the members' knowledge of their own field and of the world, the club has had several guest speakers. Among these was the manager of the World Travel Service who spoke on his experiences in Europe and explained the tours of his agency. Also, they sponsored a Needy Family Fund and gave it to the Salvation Army at Christmas.

Other objectives of the club are to unite congenially in fellowship and friendship and to promote opportunity for participation in group meetings.

Phi Epsilon Kappa, is the only national professional honorary for men who are outstanding in the health, physical education, and recreation fields. It was founded in 1913 at the Normal College of the American Gymnastic Union, in Indianapolis, which is today an extension of Indiana University. Alpha chapter moved to Bloomington a short time after the two schools had merged. Activities of the organization are carried on at both campuses.

The purpose of the fraternity is to elevate the standards, ideals, and ethics of those engaged in teaching in the fields of health, physical education, and recreation.

This school year has seen a host of outstanding activities for Phi E. K. Several social gatherings were enjoyed along with the many professional activities for which the fraternity is known. The most outstanding of which are the Student-Faculty reception, a play day held in the spring for youngsters in rural schools, and the sponsorship of several "Rec Nights" at the Student Building.

The oldest professional fraternity in the United States, Phi Delta Phi was established at Indiana University in 1900. Since that time it has been pursuing its avowed purpose of encouragement of scholarship and professional ethics and of "having a good time for the gang." Perhaps the prime function of the fraternity, however, is the placement of its graduates. In this endeavor the alumni are very helpful.

High lights of the year for Foster Inn were banquets at which members of the Indiana Bar Association and prominent attorneys were guest speakers. The Indiana Inn was also honored to have Professor Leon Wallace, their international president, and Professor Frank Horack, province president, as participating members of the group.

Phi Delta Phis are always active in their fraternity, and the alumni aspect of the honorary is equal in importance to membership in a student inn, because of the advantage in the practice of law of having this fraternity alliance. Now in its eighty-second year, Phi Delta Phi is assured of success.

1913 was the founding date of Delta Theta Phi, and Banta Senate is now one of the largest and most active senates. Recognition from the national fraternity came this year in the form of the 1950 Scholarship Cup. The Indiana Senate was competing with eighty-one senates and is therefore justly proud of the award. The cup was presented to the chapter at their Initiation Banquet in April.

The purpose of Delta Theta Phi is the fraternal union of law students in which high scholarship and a proper atmosphere of legal traditions are emphasized. This honorary fraternity is proud that Oliver Wendell Holmes, J. Edgar Hoover, Calvin Coolidge, and William O'Dwyer were prominent members.

Bi-monthly luncheon meetings at the Colonial Tea Room and fall and spring picnics were among the activities of Delta Theta Phi this year. Their success is assured through their constant endeavor to advance the ideals of the fraternity.

Improvement of the legal profession by teaching high ideals and standards to undergraduate law students is the purpose of Sigma Delta Kappa, now in its nineteenth year at Indiana. There were forty-five members this year, chosen for scholarship and character.

The social functions of this organization consisted primarily of stag parties which occurred once a month on the average, and monthly luncheons which were held at the Colonial Tea Room. At these luncheons they endeavored to obtain interesting speakers for the members; among these, Branch McCracken, their first guest speaker, gave them a very enjoyable talk on the basketball season prospects. The high light of the Alpha Pis' year, however, was their annual graduate dance held at the Bloomington Country Club.

At the annual Law Day Banquet held on May 10, 1950, the Indiana chapter presented its annual award to Brother William Steckler, Judge of the Federal District Court of Southern Indiana, a recent graduate whose achievements in public service have reflected much credit on the School of Law.

Alpha Zeta chapter of Kappa Kappa Psi, National Honorary Band Fraternity, has been in existence on this campus since 1931. The active membership of 32 bandsmen represents every school on campus. Prior to qualification for membership a man must have shown outstanding ability for at least two semesters in the I.U. bands. The aim of the organization is to further the interest of band work on campus.

This summer the local group will play host to its national convention. The I.U. men will have a chance to show off their campus to fellow members from all over the U.S.

The fraternity is busiest during football season when it entertains visiting bands, has an active part in the Variety Homecoming Show, and pledges new members—who do the dirty work on the trips that the Marching Hundred takes. It's on Hell Day that the rest of the campus hears the most from Kappa Kappa Psi—that's the day the uniformed pledges parade on campus serenading anybody and everybody whether they wish it or not.

Rho Chapter of Tau Beta Sigma is one and one-half years old on the I.U. campus. Six of the ten charter members are still active in the sorority, although two will receive their degrees in June.

The purpose of the organization is to foster better band spirit and to provide social activities for band members. It works in conjunction with the band fraternity, Kappa Kappa Psi. The members helped with decorations and refreshments at post-game mixers for visiting bandsmen and members of the Marching Hundred. They also gave a mixer for new bandwomen and are now preparing for the 1951 national convention of Tau Beta Sigma and Kappa Kappa Psi to be held at Indiana University in July.

There has been one pledge class since the chapter was installed, and subsequently the first initiation. Now, with the third group of officers recently elected, the sorority is well on its way toward becoming an established institution on this campus.

Phi Mu Alpha Sinfonia is the national professional music honorary fraternity for men with the purposes to advance the causes of music in America, to develop true fraternal spirit among its members and to give recognition to outstanding worth in musical activity.

Representing the purposes of the fraternity, the members sponsored several activities this year. In October an all-men's smoker was given to promote better relationships among faculty and students. The freshmen were particularly invited. As our annual project, they presented a public concert consisting of compositions by American composers. They sponsored a reception for the De Paur's Infantry Chorus following the auditorium series appearance of the chorus. The I.U. Men's Concert Choir sang two numbers for the Infantry Chorus at the reception.

Alpha Epsilon Delta, national pre-medical honor society, is an organization whose purpose is to stimulate the importance of pre-medical education, to promote cooperation and contact between medical and pre-medical educators and students in developing an adequate program of pre-medical education, and to bind together similarly interested students.

This year the AED's held the first State Pre-Medical Convention in Indiana. Also, the organization sponsored a radio program which brings up-to-date studies of medical research and occasionally includes features on medical history. Also, for the first time, a scholarship was made available to an outstanding pre-medical student.

Each year the pre-laws and the pre-meds hold three athletic contests—basketball, softball, and football—for the possession of the Expectoration Mug. Of the contests held, the AED's lead the pre-laws by a margin of three victories.

The M.O.D. Club, a relatively new organization on the I.U. campus, is composed of ambitious young men who aspire to be dentists. Although the name of the club is kept a secret, it is known on campus as the Men of Dentistry. The purpose of the M.O.D. Club is to better acquaint the members of the freshman class in the School of Dentistry with their classmates.

Although the future "molar maulers" were faced with a rigid scholastic curriculum, they found time to enjoy several social events. Among these events, which are sponsored annually by the club, were the class party held in November, a formal dance in March and a spring picnic.

Next year these boys will move on to Indianapolis to complete their training on the campus there.

Delta Sigma Delta has the distinction of being the oldest dental fraternity, having been founded at the University of Michigan in 1882. Delta Sigs are proud of their thirty-four active chapters and forty-one alumni chapters throughout the world, which constitute one of the largest organized groups of dentists in existence. The members of Xi chapter at Indiana University are continually striving to live up to the heritage which is theirs and to improve themselves, their fraternity, and their profession.

The chapter house is located at 1424 Central Avenue, Indianapolis, and it is here that each member finds the hub of his professional and social life while in school. A well-equipped dental laboratory, the availability of reference books and papers, and the assistance of upper-classmen, all lend aid in progressing toward the coveted D.D.S. The social schedule is crowded, and Delta Sigs are famous on the Indianapolis campus for the outstanding parties which are held at the chapter house. The members of Xi chapter feel that their fraternity is truly a "home away from home."

... A Unifying Force

Faculty and students are separated only by quantity of knowledge and by "the good old days."

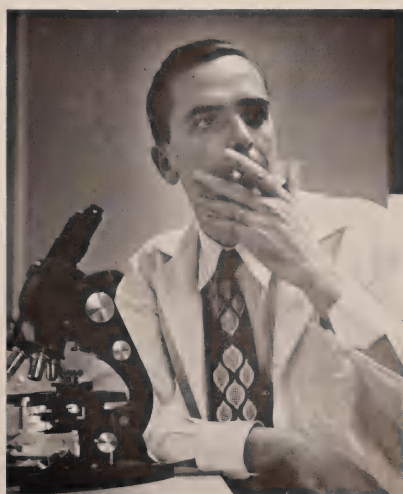

The good old days, when the going was rougher and men were men! They are shared by everyone who has graduated in the last year or in the last twenty-five. It's not a serious difference; the attitude is not one of contempt. But it's pretty apparent when two alums get together with an old Arbutus. Esprit de corps begins to blossom and reminiscences begin to flow, and they wonder just what did happen to the good old days.

There is a unifying force, however, in the interest that all these men, teachers and students, have in medicine. The subject which the student is eager to learn, the teacher is eager to explain. The interest may be tempered by time and by sophistication, but it is nevertheless the same interest.

MEDICINE

The cartoonist's conception of a med student lives in a laboratory, always wears a white jacket, pours villainous solutions from one test tube to another, and laughs fiendishly all the while. Delete the ghoulish giggle, and we approach the truth.

Probably the biggest gap between the meds and the "others" is the difference of terminology. The nonchalant references to Agar plates and cultures, O.B. and I.V.'s, biochem and bacte, are completely confusing to the layman. Subjects which he considers grisly are quite proper as dinner table conversation for the meds. They become hardened to practically everything in the book. Fear of T.B. is the only thing a medical man never overcomes.

Students, being students, are obliged to gripe. Complaining and coffee at Bea's are a traditional combination. To be sure, a minimum of ten autopsies in the junior year is not the most pleasant thing to deal with, and case histories are not always as captivating as they might seem. There are bright spots, however. Many medics feel encouraged when they are detailed for outdoor O.B. or to the clinic for neuropathology.

The layman is inclined to throw up his hands in mixed admiration and awe when he considers the long and arduous road of med school. He wonders just what makes a man want to undertake the job. If a med student feels a need to ease suffering and save life, the desire is sincere and personal, and not open to casual discussion. Perhaps some of them launch into the medical world because of family tradition. The reasons are as varied and as many as the people who give them. But all of them have an intense interest in things medical and scientific. Without it, they could not even make a start. This much we do know: any student who has begun the course feels a deep-seated obligation to finish it with credit.

The bond between "men of science" and the "man on the street" is a universal curiosity about all things of a medical or scientific nature. The layman's somewhat naive approach finds its counterpart in the more ambitious and practical application of the professional man.

Dentistry is no longer a field in which the only necessary knowledge is the use of pliers vs. tooth. The men in the profession must work all the time to keep abreast of many new developments. Among these recent technical developments are plastic fillings and "permanent" false teeth.

The outlay of equipment for these things is enormous. Learning to use it is no small task. The dents spend most of their time in one room practicing drilling, filling, and polishing. The techniques require skillful coordination of hand and eye as well as an expenditure of some time and effort in order to perfect them.

When the students reach their junior and senior years, they finally get a chance to use their theories. Their patients are volunteers who pay for the materials and are willing to take their chances along with the relatively inexperienced dentist. To the students' credit, very few complaints have ever been registered.

DENTISTRY

NURSING

Nurses, like Caesar, are all things to all men. They are ministering angels in white to poets and idealists. Song writers tell us "they don't wanna get well, they're in love with a beautiful nurse." Hard-boiled realists look on them as the poor gals who have to clean up after the doctors leave. How do the nurses feel about it? Alternately they feel all these things. But they entered the field with enthusiasm, and continue to hold the same interest as long as they practice.

Nursing, too, has come a long way since pre-Nightingale days. Technical and psychological knowledge is ranked as high as the practical know-how of making beds or changing dressings. The modern nursing student spends hours of training in labs and with textbooks. She studies anatomy and chemistry, physiology and pharmacology.

She learns to be the doctor's girl Friday in all phases of medical application. Each student spends an allotted time in each ward of the hospital, studying the ins and outs of everything from maternity to surgery to psychoanalysis.

The discipline at the center must necessarily be rather rigid. Personnel is divided in sharp categories ranging in prestige from supervisors to probies. Only a nurse can fully appreciate the thrill of being capped and moving out of the probie status. Even more exciting is the day when she finally takes her state board, puts a black band on her cap, and becomes an official R.N.

FORT WAYNE

Since September of 1917 residents of Fort Wayne and the surrounding lake area have been served by the Fort Wayne Center. Initially a single room in the Allen County Courthouse sufficed for administrative purposes, and a few scattered rooms easily accommodated the students. A healthy growth made centralization desirable, and in 1939 the present location was purchased. At peak enrollment in 1945-49 the Center boasted a student body of 2,469. A teaching staff of 54 instructors is required to offer approximately 300 college credit and popular lecture classes.

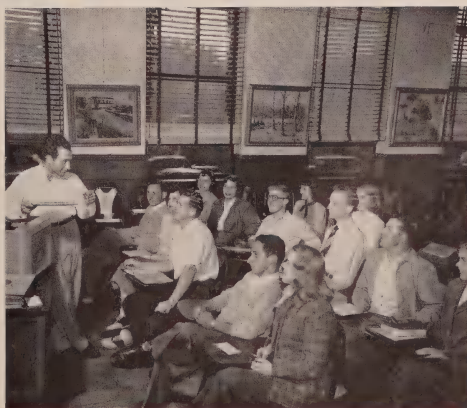

To further Indiana University's extension program, Calumet Center was inaugurated in 1932. In 1939, the present building was opened for classes, although many other school buildings are now used for night classes.

This year approximately 1500 students from the Calumet Region attended the center. It offers not only courses in the first and second years of undergraduate work but also a wide range of courses in the graduate educational school for adults. The classes are taught by Indiana University professors from Bloomington.

The students take time off from studies to enjoy various types of social activities. Although they live at home, the student body is unified in the Centerites, an organization which sponsors bi-weekly informal dances as well as three formals each year.

Calumet Center has proved again this year that it renders a valuable service to the people of the Calumet Region.

CALUMET

GARY

The Gary Center is, this year, the proud owner of a lovely new library of over 8,000 books. These books which used to be the property of Gary College now accommodate the 1,400 students of the Gary Center.

The students are organized into freshman and sophomore groups with officers for each group. These two groups of officers form the executive committee of the school. This executive committee with the help of various student committees plans the social activities for the school.

The Gary Center has several parties and activities throughout the year but at the top of the list are the Annual Holiday Formal, the Annual Summer Formal, and the student-directed style show. Lounge parties and talent shows are also popular with the Gary students.

The Gary Center has an annual graduation for all students who have completed sixty hours with them. The graduation takes the form of a banquet and they have student entertainment and speeches, as well as a guest speaker—usually from the campus.

INDIANAPOLIS

The Indianapolis Adult Education Center draws most of its students from Indianapolis and eighty-four surrounding cities. Many of the students take non-credit courses as well as academic classes in such fields as art and music from the full-time and part-time teaching staff. The Center hopes to broaden its services soon to include a more varied course than already offered to meet the professional and cultural needs in adult education.

In keeping with the motto that recreation is as important as learning, the Center offered many recreational activities—a Christmas dance—the Thanksgiving event and a spring dance. The students spend a great deal of time in the new library and bookstore, and the student lounge is a favorite “hang-out.”

This division of Adult Education was founded in 1912 and since that time has reached an enrollment of more than 3,000 in 1950.

KOKOMO

More than 3000 people have become students of Indiana University by attending the Kokomo Center during its first six years of service to North Central Indiana. Housed in an old mansion of the gay nineties with a spacious campus sufficiently large for further expansion, the Center is prepared to serve adequately the educational needs of the community. Its sphere of influence has been greatly increased by offering classes in adjoining cities.

Veterans and recent high-school graduates are working toward degrees at Indiana University, while many adults are also taking regular college courses to gain advancement in their present positions or to prepare for new positions. Others participate in the Great Books Discussion Group, The Civic Theater, The Community Orchestra and the art classes simply for the cultural and creative values. Counseling service is provided to all students who desire assistance in planning their college program or life work. Teachers may also take work on graduate degrees in this area. Whenever possible, the Center makes its facilities available for small community meetings.

SOUTH BEND

Jack J. Detzler was chosen to succeed Donald F. Carmony as director of Indiana University's South Bend-Mishawaka Extension Center when Mr. Carmony moved to Bloomington this summer to become an assistant dean in the Division of Adult Education. Mr. Detzler finished his class requirements for his Ph.D. degree in history at Indiana University in August, 1950. He had served as assistant director and counselor of the South Bend-Mishawaka Center under Dean Carmony and was well acquainted with the work he now supervises.

Under this new leadership, the Center has continued to grow in both the number of students and courses offered. It was one of the few centers to show an increase in enrollment last year. Few centers offered more than the 120 different credit courses and the 40 popular lecture series which were on the South Bend-Mishawaka program. Included in the popular lecture series were such topics and interests as Old and New Testament Literature, Recent Important Books, The Lyric Choir, and Home Planning and Interior Decorating.

Primarily, the Center serves an area within a thirty-mile radius of South Bend and Mishawaka, but students and adults have come from Michigan and Illinois for courses and lectures. The new director said the Center's program will be expanded to include more and more subjects as requests are made and when the needs arise.

SOUTHEASTERN

In the heart of Jeffersonville and but one mile from Louisville, Kentucky, is the Southeastern Center. This segment of Indiana University draws more than 1,000 students each semester from communities of Indiana and Kentucky. This educational offer is in its tenth year.

The Center conducts the usual academic credit courses of graduate and undergraduate level in addition to the various special offerings of interest to adult groups.

A resident staff of ten full-time members and thirty part-time instructors conducts classes at Southeastern.

The Southeastern Student is published here and student activities function through a faculty-guided Student Council. Each year the Southeastern Center becomes more like an off-campus campus.

RICHMOND

"You are never too old to learn" is the Richmond Center motto. Nor does a job stand in the way of Richmondites because classes are held in late afternoons and evenings to make possible attendance with no interruption of work schedules. Nor is it necessary to be striving for a complete college education because such courses as ceramics, sketching, and survey of antiques are offered on a non-academic, non-credit basis. But, if a student is headed toward a degree he has the opportunity of obtaining at least two years of college work at the center.

Besides offering knowledge from books, the center also sponsors a series of great movies. With the help of its co-sponsor, the center has the facilities of the Earlham College library. The Richmond Center was the first to be set up under joint sponsorship, Earlham College working with Indiana University to make this institution possible.

BOARD

"Who knows what evil lurks in the hearts of men?"
Aeons know! And what's more, they won't tell anyone. The key word of this organization is secrecy.

In spite of the many jibes taken at this secrecy, the board is really a serious undertaking. Founded by William Lowe Bryan, it had its first meeting on April 12, 1921. Its purpose is to establish greater cooperation between the student body and the faculty, and to further the best interests of Indiana University.

OF AEONS

The name, Aeons, was taken from the Bible. It refers to a group which occupied a position between heaven and earth, and served as a go-between for men and angels. I.U.'s Aeons act in an advisory capacity to the administrative officials.

At the present time, the men are appointed to the Board by President Wells, on the basis of scholarship and general merit. The Board consists of not less than eight men, and not more than twelve. This year they held the maximum membership.

BLUE KEY

Membership in Blue Key, the distinguished national honor fraternity for junior and senior men, is one of the highest awards available to those who can meet its requirements. A minimum of one hundred Blue Key points, an accumulative grade average equaling the all men's average or the attainment of this average immediately preceding selection, and an outstanding leadership ability in a service capacity toward the university are the necessary qualifications.

Intensified and perpetuated belief in God, an ambition for intellectual attainment and enrichment of student life are the purposes toward which Blue Key strives. Its high standards are reflected in the motto, "Serving, I Live."

The annual campus projects of this organization include liaison work between the administration and the Bloomington Jaycees, sponsoring of the Firebell basketball game between Purdue University and I.U., the Quarterback Hour, and liaison work between the administration and various campus service organizations.

Mortar Board, the national honorary for senior women, is a service organization to the University. This spring our new pledges, who most closely represent the ideals of scholarship, service and leadership, were tapped by the retiring eighteen members.

Taking tickets at the golden gates during the Dames' Ball, was old Saint Peter himself. This helped set the mood for Eddie Howard and his orchestra's "Heaven-sent" music to which over a thousand people danced. Mortar Board sponsored this dance. "Show your own favorite angel just how divine an evening can be" was a popular theme among the girls. Many wings and haloes were donned for the one evening in the year that the girls were the escorts and paid the bills for their dates. Our dates wore the traditional mortar boards as their headdress.

Being a service organization, we offered many scholarships and other things for individuals. To the outstanding sophomore woman we gave a $200 scholarship in honor of Cora B. Hennel, first honorary member of Mortar Board on this campus. Several $100 scholarships were given in the spring. Calendars were sold through housing unit representatives. We put out the approved tutor list before the fall mid-terms, and we acted as a women's advisory board to the administration.

Through the years, Sphinx Club has justified its existence at Indiana University by making itself useful about the campus, and fostering good will and fellowship among men students. Since the club's founding in 1910, the traditional symbol of Sphinx members is the white skull cap with a black band. The men of Sphinx are chosen for their participation in extra-curricular activities, as well as for their personal character. The outstanding junior or senior men from each fraternity were members of the organization this year.

Activities of the organization were both numerous and widespread. A famed tradition carried on was the Table Waiters Ball, sponsored to gain funds for scholarships which were given to the most deserving "I" men. Other activities included the annual Dad's Day function and the presentation of cups to the housing units having the best decorations for homecoming.

After a long and successful record as a part of the University, Sphinx Club hopes to continue its work of promoting unity among the men on campus.

The Flame, top honorary for Independent men of I.U., gives recognition for juniors and seniors proficient in scholarship, fellowship, and service to their university and fellow students.

Organized in 1939, Flame since then has been symbolical with the word, Independent. Working for a more integrated group to serve students and the university, Flame this year inaugurated a leadership training program for underclassmen. In cooperation with Pamarada, the annual Well House Waltz, proceeds of which go to maintain upkeep on the Well House, was highly successful. Also, Pamarada and Flame cooperated to present a show at the I.U. Fall Carnival. The annual Alumni Banquet was enjoyed by all, and Flame regained possession of the Flame-Sphinx Athletic Trophy by trouncing Sphinx in touch football.

The pledges helped to improve the campus during their pledgeship by working with Buildings and Grounds, and the club continued its policy of supplying magazines to the I.U. infirmary. A successful initiation banquet climaxed the fall semester.

Pamarada, campus honorary for independent junior and senior women, was founded on Indiana University's campus on November 8, 1942. Since that time Pamarada has served as an incentive to junior and senior women to be active in campus activities and to maintain a 1.5 average to meet this organization's requirements.

Pamarada, together with Flame Club, began its activities for the year by co-sponsoring the "Well House Waltz," held in Alumni Hall in October. They also participated in the planning and sponsoring of the "Hon'ary Hop," held in conjunction with all campus honoraries. In April Pamarada held its annual Scholarship Tea at which time recognition was given to independent junior and senior women for their creditable scholarship and work in campus activities.

The girls of Pamarada hope that those who follow in their footsteps in future years will carry on the traditions that have been so well established.

Pleiades, the organized upperclasswomen's honorary, completed another successful year of fine social and scholastic endeavors. The members of the organization are chosen because of scholastic achievement and participation in campus activities. The aims of Pleiades are to uphold high scholarship, promote school spirit, and further cooperation among the organized and independent women on campus.

This year, Pleiades participated in the Council of Honoraries' "Hon'ary Hop" in October. Along with the Falcon Club they sponsored the "Merry Mac Hop" in March. The proceeds were used to buy trophies for senior varsity basketball players. As in years past, Pleiades and Pamarada worked together on a Christmas project in cooperation with A.W.S.

The new pledges, who will carry on Pleiades' valuable services to the student body next year, were announced at Women's Mass Meeting in April. This was followed the next week end by an initiation banquet.

Falcon Club, which is the honorary for junior organized men, was composed of seventy-three men representing thirty different fraternities last year. The men of this organization are chosen by their respective houses and then elected as members of Falcon Club. Officers are elected each semester and serve for one full semester.

In campus affairs, Falcon Club has a prominent position. Under its auspices, two trophies are awarded—one to the outstanding football player, as judged by a student vote, and another to the basketball player with the best free-throw shooting average over the period of one basketball season. The voting for the football trophy is conducted at the last game each fall and the trophy is presented at the first basketball game of the year.

The "Firebell Ball" is the dance that Falcon sponsors each year in conjunction with the I.U.-Purdue basketball game in which the traditional Firebell is at stake.

Every year the Tomahawk pledges must find a woman on campus with the temporary name of Malbuna Humperdink before initiation can take place. This is only one of many and varied activities of the sophomore honorary for independent men.

This spring a trophy was given to the outstanding all-around baseball player of the season. The traditional $100 scholarship was given to a needy Sophomore student. The organization also took part in the Council of Honoraries' informal "Honorary Hop."

The wearers of the maroon and gold pods of Tomahawk belong to a service organization which is designed to benefit the campus and the students who are members.

The veterans' scholastic honorary fraternity on the campus, Gamma chapter of Chi Gamma Iota, has grown from a charter membership of eighteen, at its founding in April 1948, to a total of 256 members at present. Chi Gamma Iota is an organization of veterans of World War II who have an accumulative scholastic average of "B" or better. The purpose of the fraternity is twofold: recognizing high scholastic attainment by veterans, and promoting better human relations by accepting all eligible veteran students regardless of race, color, sex, or creed.

The activities of the fraternity include monthly get-togethers with movies or talks on current topics. It is highlighted by a formal banquet at the end of each semester at which new members are accepted and new officers are installed into the organization.

The fraternity boasts members from all branches of the services, which includes two members of the fairer sex.

Skull and Crescent, the Sophomore honorary for organized men, functions as a service organization — to promote better feelings among organized men and to assist the university.

This year the wearers of the orange-and-green pods gave a Christmas party at the Salvation Army complete with Santa Claus and presents for the children. In November a queen was elected at our annual Sweater Hop with the gift being a sweater. Of course, there was a consolation prize. As a service to freshmen, Skull and Crescent handles the freshman boresses and the burning of the green pods. Being challenged to a game of basketball by Tomahawk, we ended the basketball season by coming out victoriously.

Being an honorary, Skull and Crescent deems scholarship very important. To promote scholastic achievements among the sophomore class, every fall a $50 scholarship is given a sophomore not belonging to the club.

Over three men from each fraternity will receive the pods passed on to them by the men who have fostered the traditions of the royal order of the Skull and Moon.

The green "T" of Tophets is the mark of a sophomore organized woman who has shown potentialities in leadership, activities, and high scholarship. The chief aims of the organization are to develop these potentialities and to promote friendly relations among sophomore girls. Since its founding in 1945, Tophets has tried to achieve these aims by acquainting underclassmen with the success which can be attained by working with one another.

The group is composed of representatives from each social sorority who take their part in the activities of the organization. Each year Tophets participates in an activity with the honorary for male sophomores. This year, Christmas caroling with the boys of Skull and Crescent provided an evening of chilly December fun. A contribution to the A.W.S. Christmas project was one of Tophets' projects during the school year. To promote friendly relations on campus Tophets sponsors "Hello Day" at which time each member makes it her responsibility to show friendliness to Indiana students. An annual affair is the Blue Crest-Tophet breakfast.

DRAGON'S HEAD

Having arrived at membership in this august body, no other effort need be expended save that occasioned by the mutual admiration of one another. This purpose is admirably served at the one meeting each semester at a downtown club where pledges vie with each other in buying the biggest and juiciest steaks for the actives — not to mention refreshment of a kind.

The persons holding the following top campus positions are eligible for membership in Dragon's Head: President of the Student Body, Editor-in-Chief of the Daily Student, Chief Justice of the Student Supreme Court, President of Union Board, President of Interfraternity Council, Captain of the Football Team, President of the Board of Aeons, President of Blue Key, Editor of the Arbutus, President of Flame Club, President of M.R.C.A., President of the Senior Class, and President of Sphinx Club.

The club was started at a boress as a mutual admiration society for campus rods. Throughout the passing years Dragon's Head has proudly kept unsullied the high purposes of its founders and has continued to enjoy good steaks ever since.

Phi Eta Sigma is an honorary fraternity which invites to membership those freshman men who have attained a grade average of 2.5 or higher. This one qualification presents such a barrier to the freshman student that often fewer than fifty men out of a class of two thousand are eligible for membership.

At the beginning of the year, Phi Eta Sigma joined Alpha Lambda Delta, freshman women's honorary, in holding a picnic for the incoming freshmen who were recipients of scholarships. The two fraternities hoped in this way to encourage the freshmen in scholastic achievement. The success of the venture, however, is still in doubt—so far, only six of the scholarship students have qualified for membership in Phi Eta Sigma.

Although last year's work was limited by the constant lack of a quorum, the new year brings new possibilities for "the smartest outfit on campus."

Created in 1895 as the Women's League, the A.W.S. today has the same purpose for which it was founded. The Council acts to bring about a greater spirit of unity and mutual helpfulness among women students, and it encourages active cooperation in the work of women's self-government.

The Council, composed of sixteen girls, this year efficiently governed the many committees working under it. Co-etiquette was published for new women students, and the Newsletter was distributed on the campus every other week. Events planned by the Social Committee included a party for new co-eds, a spring fashion show, and "Christmas Eve on Campus."

Two of our most active committees were the Transfer Bureau and the Recreation Committee, which co-sponsored Play Nights at the Student Building with the Campus Recreation Committee. The Careers Conference this year arranged a series of conferences on the subject of careers for women. These committees, and many more, combined to make 1950-51 a wonderful year for the A.W.S. Council, and a milestone in the progress of the Association.

BOARD OF STANDARDS

OFFICERS

Chairman.....Sue Block

"Well, what goes on in the Senate?" is the usual opening query, and the talkingest group on campus is off once more to a lively discussion. The Board of Standards, which meets once a week, is noted for its prolonged gabfests, but more especially for its worthy service.

The purpose of the Board is twofold. It is in charge of the enforcement of the Activities Limitations Bill, and it has the power to recommend point changes. Secondly, the loquacious members of the Board discuss problems which are brought to them by the A.W.S. Council and the Dean of Women. Although they cannot legislate, their discussions and recommendations are very valuable and helpful to the A.W.S. Council.

The Board of Standards, which now numbers fourteen girls, was organized in 1939. They realize their great responsibility to the women students of the university, and they are constantly trying to be of greater service.

Now in its thirteenth year, the I.S.A. has continued to serve the independent students both on and off campus with an extensive social and recreational program and an intramural sports league. Having divorced itself from the active political scene, the organization now devotes itself to the social betterment of the independent students as well as presenting them with greater opportunity for more active participation in campus activities. The General Council, a representative group of 40 students elected from the general membership, acts as the governing body of the organization.

The Indiana chapter of I.S.A. took an active part in the Central Region Convention held at Beloit, Wisconsin, in November, and one of its members was elected to the regional board, who, as such, will act as contact chairman for all member schools in the state of Indiana. A delegation also attended the National I.S.A. Convention at the University of Kansas in April.

"Religion, the unifier" could well be the motto of the Student Religious Cabinet, which was founded at I.U. thirteen years ago. The Cabinet's membership includes representatives of the Christian Science Organization; The Hillel Foundation; Newman Club; The Protestant Student Council; and those of any other denomination or organized religious groups on the campus. Its members associate, not as adherents of a particular denomination, but as students interested in maintaining and developing a program of fellowship and of correlation of all religious activities on the campus.

Each year the Cabinet offers a welcoming hand to all new students at its traditional Freshman Breakfast. The campus-centered religious work carried on throughout the year, culminates in the Cabinet-sponsored Religious Emphasis Week.

In its never-ending endeavor to dissipate intolerance between racial and religious groups, the Student Religious Cabinet offers a working example of the interfaith concept.

Although Red Cross is comparatively new at Indiana, it is one of the most active organizations on the campus. The members of the unit were quite proud and happy this year when they were granted office space in the Union Building.

With the aid of the new office it was much more convenient to perform the services and tasks which the Red Cross gives to the campus and local community. Such services include aiding foreign students, carrying on safety drives, providing first aid stations at campus functions, and assisting the Bloomington city unit of Red Cross. Some of the special projects this year were providing homes in which foreign students may eat Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, monthly parties for the county farm, and entertaining at Billings Hospital and Camp Atterbury. A new service this year was assisting the Bloomington unit during the blood donor campaign.

In addition to these activities, Red Cross arranged a student "play night" in the Student Building and with Cosmopolitan Club they sponsored an "International Night" dance in the spring.

The Y.W. working with Christian Center kids.

Recognizing that everyone wants to live effectively, the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. provide programs to offer students an opportunity to make campus life a period of growth in balanced living; socially, mentally, physically and spiritually.

Outstanding as service organizations since their founding on the campus in 1891, the Y's are known for their activities with purpose, their fellowship, their spiritual influence in helping students find a full and creative life.

UNION BOARD

This year the Union Board has begun to sponsor many new activities—the student opinion committee which conducts student opinion polls—a fencing club—a coeducational billiard club for women who want to learn billiards—the information desk in the Union building lobby—station wagon tours of the campus on Saturdays and the formation of a block “I” at basketball games.

Many of the activities on campus were sponsored by Union Board, an organization whose primary interest is to serve the students, friends, and alumni of the University.

The Union Board and A.W.S. jointly sponsored the Fall Carnival, the Opening of Formal Season, Christmas Eve on Campus, and the Easter Parade. A style show was given as part of the festivities of Easter.

The Madrigal Dinner in December was one of the most unusual and best-enjoyed activities. Sponsored by the Union Board, the dinner was styled after the 17th century. Seventeenth-century food was served, even including the flaming plum pudding.

AND THE SENATE

"In recognition of our need and in order to encourage democratic thought and action . . ." the present form of student government was organized three years ago.

The Student Senate is the supreme legislative body of the students of Indiana University and since its formation has taken strides in gaining prestige and strength.

The Student Senate controls and supervises all elections, which involves substantially all men and/or women and classes.

Student views and ideas are presented to the administration by the Senate. The Senate approved the 1951-52 school calendar and later worked in cooperation with the athletic department to stop smoking in the Fieldhouse.

The usual elections—class, Homecoming Queen, Prom Queen, Presidential and Senatorial, are not without controversy and difficulty. But controversy makes for good student participation.

The Activities Limitations Law was revised and enforced by a hard-working Men's Activities Limitation Board.

Not to be forgotten is the night President John Kerr received the White Lily of Purity after the Theta Sigma Phi Razz Banquet. President Kerr accepted the prize without a blush.

The Student Supreme Court, modeled after the Supreme Court of the United States, completed its third successful year as the judiciary power of the student body. The court is made up of nine justices appointed by the President of the Student Body and approved by the Senate. These appointments are made from a select group of students who have above a 2.1 grade average. They must also be students of outstanding character, who are willing to follow a strict code of discipline.

The powers of the Supreme Court include interpreting the Constitution of the Student Body and the acts passed by the Senate. Cases involving student infractions of university rules and regulations, which are referred to it by the Dean of Students, as well as organizational disputes are heard before the court.

The Supreme Court has done much to improve student-administration relations during its three years of existence, and has proved itself to be an invaluable organ in our system of student government.

THE DAILY STUDENT

ITS EDITORIAL STAFF . . .

Jack Howey, Editor-in-Chief

Jim Deputy, Editor-in-Chief

Left to right: Marshall Lincoln, Sarah Hamlett, Jim Merrell, Dick Garver, Joyce Lakey, Norma Jean Martin (Assistant Editors).

Harry Hudson, Bill Moore (Back shop workers).

Bill Taylor and Mary Lou Loudes (Reporters).

At breakfast tables in fraternity houses, in chow lines at the dorms, over morning snacks in the Commons, students and faculty members reach for The Indiana Daily Student as naturally as they reach for their second cup of coffee.

Five mornings a week for fifty-three years, The Student has brought news of the campus, city, and nation to university students and employees. The Student has been the university newspaper since 1867, when it began monthly publication owing allegiance to no faction, subservient to no personal motives of exultation, pure in tone, seeking the common good.

Ken Bergman, Louise Arnett, Joyce Lakey.

Seated: Betty Jo Ramsey, Don Reedor (Editor-in-Chief), James McNeile. Standing: Charles Castor, Carolyn Schnaitter, Bernie Rosenthal, Bob Longood. (All Associate Editors)

Donna Doane (Women's Editor), Jeanne Franke (Campus Editor).

Bill Bolling (Sports Editor), Bob Shaffer (Picture Editor).

Besides being the chief source of news of the campus, The Student serves as a training ground for Indiana's future editors, reporters, and writers. Ernie Pyle was one of the outstanding newspapermen who received his first training on The Student.

This year, The Student campaigned for school spirit and cleaner politics. It asked for better infirmary service and for abolition of smoking in the Fieldhouse. Its senior staff members were graduated with a background of practical work in a job that was at once demanding, criticized, and satisfying — putting out the paper.

AND ITS BUSINESS STAFF

The power behind the power is the business staff of The Indiana Daily Student. This is the staff that makes possible the publication of the paper — the students who solicit advertising, manage the office, supervise circulation, and handle promotion for the school paper.

The business manager is responsible for organization, coordination, planning and supervision of business activities. Ways to dramatize the use of The Student to readers and advertisers are handled by the promotion department. The circulation department assures the delivery of The Student every morning to housing units, news stands, homes, and the mail. Students may sell anything from diamonds to typewriters; rent a room or hire a dance band; find a lost dog or fraternity pin through the classified ads in The Daily Student.

The business staff provides the means for the publications of the paper; it keeps the wheels moving smoothly.

The Crimson Bull, Indiana's humor magazine, is sponsored and published by Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

The Bull brings to the campus what it believes to be the best possible sampling of college humor. In doing this it not only incorporates the talents of its staff, but also draws from students who care to contribute worthwhile copy.

People passing the Bull office are usually disappointed not to hear roars of laughter; there is little time for witty remarks when the small staff gets together to turn out the book. It isn't an easy job to turn out six issues, with 2,500 copies per issue.

That the Bull has been highly successful this year is shown by the fact that every issue was completely sold out. The editors, having made a survey of the campus have come to the startling conclusion that they have a readership of 10,000 students per issue. This is due to the exchange of the Bull within housing units.

THE CRIMSON BULL

THE FOLIO

The Folio, Indiana University's creative literary magazine, is written by and for the students. Although the staff is composed of English majors, there occasionally appears a selection from a guest amateur or professional writer.

For the first time, the staff is composed of four sections, business, art, literary and managing. The literary is the staff which selects the manuscripts to be used. The magazine, composed of non-fiction, fiction and poetry, affords an opportunity for the creation of literary works and gives the writers an opportunity to see their work in print. The other staffs offer experience in their respective fields. For instance, students interested in art and illustration may gain experience on the art staff.

The Folio, which was published three times this year, served as supplemental reading in some English composition classes. The high literary standards are hoped to be upheld by the future writers of the Folio.

MEN'S CONCERT CHOIR

The Indiana University Singing Hoosiers, formerly known as the Men's Concert Choir, is representative of the entire student body. Above all others it is the musical group in which membership is most avidly sought, and the group which is most in demand for on-campus and off-campus appearances.

Early in the fall of 1950, the choir adopted the name "Singing Hoosiers" and joined forces with the Fighting Hoosiers and the Hurrying Hoosiers to carry the name of Indiana University to victory in music as well as sports. A humorous variety show was prepared which comprised a liberal amount of comedy and added new laurels to the choir's versatility and musical ability. The Singing Hoosiers under the direction of Professor George F. Krueger have presented concerts throughout Indiana and surrounding states for the past four years. This year the total number of concerts given by the choir exceeded fifty. Included in these concerts was a ten-day tour in February when the choir gave eighteen concerts in various cities in Indiana, Michigan, and Ohio. On October 11, 1950, the choir serenaded Governor Schriker in the State House in Indianapolis.

The aim of the choir, aside from the pleasure of participation, is to arouse interest and enthusiasm in others for choral activities.

UNIVERSITY SINGERS

When Wilfred C. Bain, dean of the School of Music, came to Indiana University, the University Singers was the only mixed, unaccompanied vocal organization. It did no concert work and was on much the same level as all the other vocal groups. In the few years that he has been the director of the Singers, Dr. Bain has changed it to a concert group made up of students having the most mature voices. About one-third of the organization's members are graduate students, helping to attain the goal of having the best vocal group possible.

The first semester of this year was spent in getting a program ready for the Singers' yearly tour. Between semesters, they traveled to Illinois, giving a number of fine concerts. During the second semester, the Singers made up the chorus for "Parsifal" and "Rigoletto" and other operatic performances.

Dean Bain is pleased with the progress made by the group and hopes to follow a similar program in the future.

SYMPHONY BAND

The Symphony Band, the principal concert band of the university, is composed of ninety carefully selected and outstanding musicians.

This group, under the able conductorship of Daniel L. Martino, Director of Bands, has earned an enviable position of commanding importance for its many performances of artistic excellence.

Heralded as "one of the finest in the nation," the Symphony Band completed an unusually successful concert season. Notable among the band's performances were the recordings, broadcasts, formal campus concerts and ten annual tour appearances in cities of northern Indiana and Illinois, and southern Michigan.

The Band's motto, "For Artistic Excellence of Bands and Band Music," has truly become a reality with this highly versatile organization. The Symphony Band has lived up to its ideals: culture, education, service, and recreation.

THE MARCHING 100

In 1900 the first I.U. band was formed; it has progressed until today we have one of the most outstanding college bands in the country.

The smooth-working formations that were seen at the football games come from hours of hard drilling. It is estimated that 1400 man-hours a week are spent getting the band into the shape that is seen on the field. To achieve this precision, many devices are employed, even marching with their eyes closed.

The excellent staff spends an untold number of hours working out formations—every man must have an assigned position on the field at all times.

The band was recently honored when R.C.A. Victor requested that they record an album of Indiana songs. This album includes: "Indiana, Our Indiana," "Chimes of Indiana," "Indiana Loyalty," and "Hail to Old I.U."

Besides putting on the famous halftime pageants during the football season, the band also provides music for the basketball games.

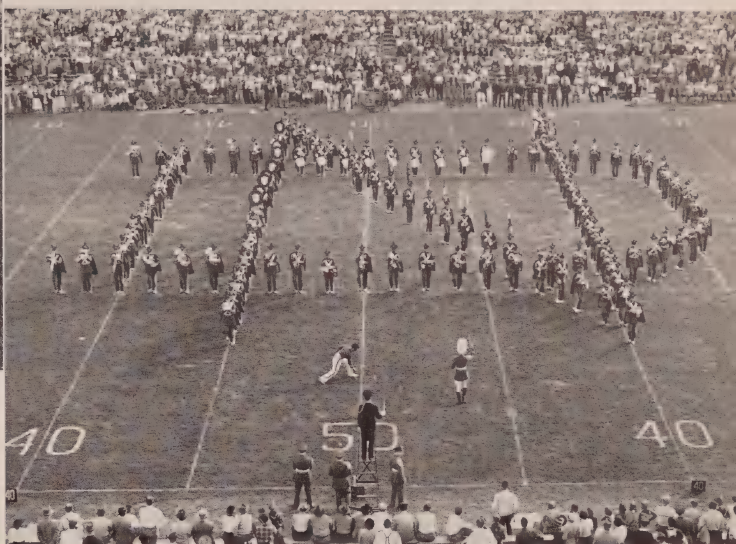

The band carries on through any kind of weather as evidenced at the Purdue game.

The Philharmonic has been very active this year with at least one concert every month on campus. Fall and spring tours of Indiana and Illinois completed their schedule. The orchestra has an extremely varied repertoire, and works from Bach to Copland were performed. An especially successful endeavor was the presentation of Shostakovich's difficult Fifth Symphony. Parsifal, Wagner's religious opera, and Verdi's Rigoletto were given in the spring.

Under the direction of Professor Ernest H. Hoffman, the Philharmonic is run exactly like a professional orchestra to prepare its members for their careers after graduation. A fine future is guaranteed this organization because of its quality and skill.

Often referred to as the finest university orchestra in the United States, Indiana University's Philharmonic Orchestra is famed for its professional quality. A membership of one hundred and six skilled musicians enables the group to give varied and large-scale performances.

The University Theatre Business Staff plays an indispensable behind-the-scenes part in every University Theatre production. Although its members never appear behind the footlights, they are responsible for the practical business management that makes the production a financial success.

The staff, under the direction of Pat Nackenhorst, senior business manager, is divided into five committees: advertising, publicity, ushering, tickets, and pre-sales. Each committee is headed by a junior business manager. The staff has the job of selling advertising space in the theatre programs, distributing posters, planning newspaper publicity, arranging usher staffs, and selling tickets.

Staff members are chosen from applications each spring by the senior manager and the head of the Speech Department on the basis of their work the previous year and by recommendations of the junior managers.

Paul J. Harrell, Athletic Director

The planning and administration of Indiana's athletic program is under the supervision of Athletic Director Paul J. (Pooch) Harrell and the Athletic Board of Control. It is their responsibility to formulate I.U.'s policies and plans that are included under the Department of Athletics. These include not only varsity but intramural athletics.

Pooch has been affiliated with Indiana for a quarter of a century. First as a student and star athlete — then in a coaching capacity — and finally, since 1943, as Athletic Director.

Dr. William R. Breneman, professor of zoology, is chairman of the Athletic Board of Control. Since 1944, he has also been I.U.'s faculty representative on the Big Ten Athletic Board, the group that makes the rules that govern the athletic competition in the Western Conference.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS

COACHING STAFF

Clyde B. Smith, Head Coach

The football fortunes of Indiana University are guided by Head Coach Clyde B. Smith and his staff. Smith replaced Bo McMillin as I.U.'s head coach in 1943. Smitty previously was at Indiana from 1934 to 1938 when he developed some of the Hoosiers' greatest lines as an assistant to McMillin.

Smith's 1950 eleven compiled a 3-wins, 5-losses, 1-tie record — and was considered to be one of the more promising teams in the country. Last November, he signed a new three-year contract which will run through the 1953 season.

Smitty is capably aided by four varsity assistants. Don Edmonds, star I.U. back from 1930-1932, is the backfield coach. Three men tutor the linemen. Steve Sinko handles the tackles and centers. Jim Freeman, All-Big Ten guard for I.U. in 1936 and 1937, works with the guards. Bob Ravensberg, All-American end on Indiana's championship team of 1945, is the end coach.

The Hoosiers' freshman teams are coached by Edward Whereatt and his assistant Charley McDaniel. Charley doubles as varsity wrestling mentor.

The 1950 "Fighting Hoosiers" opened their season September 30, with a 20-20 deadlock against Nebraska at Lincoln. On the next three week ends, they returned home to play on the familiar turf of Memorial Stadium. Against Iowa, the Homecoming Game, the Hoosiers pounded out a 20-7 victory. The following week end, seeking their second Big Ten triumph, Indiana went down before a splendid Ohio State eleven. October 21, 1950, will remain a red-letter day in Indiana sport history. It was on that memorable day that the Hoosiers, for the first time since 1906, defeated Notre Dame, 20-7. I.U. was on the road the following three week ends, losing conference games at Illinois, Michigan State, and Michigan. November 18 the Hoosiers came back to Bloomington to trounce Marquette, 18-7. The Cream and Crimson ended its season on a sad note, dropping the Purdue "Old Oaken Bucket" contest, 13-0, in a blizzard at Lafayette.

MANAGERS . . .

People often hear of the linemen of a football team as the "unsung heroes," but few realize that the managers really do the dirty work that is necessary to the running of a team. They prepare the equipment (pads, helmets, shoes, pants, jerseys, etc.) before football practice begins and have to store it when the season ends. Between these times, they hand out and take in the equipment each day and do the many odd jobs that the coaches and players require. They are the service and maintenance men that keep the football machine well lubricated and in fine running order.

DECISION

A game hangs in the fire. Upon this decision may rest the outcome of the game. Coach Smith confers with the quarterback and team captain as to a select play to put into action. If this play is used at a strategic moment, the game can be won.

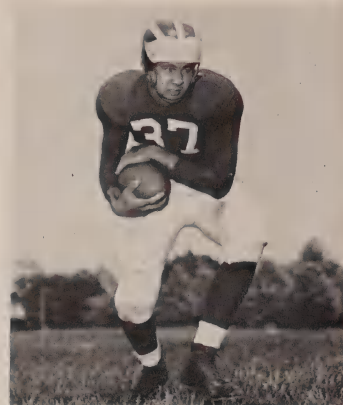

ON THE FOLLOWING PAGES — THE OUTSTANDING PLAYS AND PLAYERS OF THE SEASON WILL BE SHOWN.

Ernie Kovatch . . . offensive tackle and defensive end . . . honorary captain for the season . . . captain of the Nebraska, Notre Dame, and Purdue games.

Bill Smith . . . offensive guard and defensive line backer . . . captain of Iowa game.

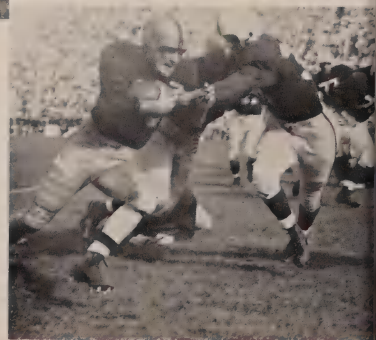

Arnold (Burr) Bowman . . . offensive fullback and defensive line backer . . . captain of Ohio State game.

Once in a while, a football player will become overly anxious and violate rules. A flying tackle, if called, is subject to a 15-yard penalty.

Good defensive play is just as important as offensive play, and often it takes the teamwork of two men to stop a hard-running opponent. The first tackle may not stop the runner but it will set the runner up for a teammate to make the kill.

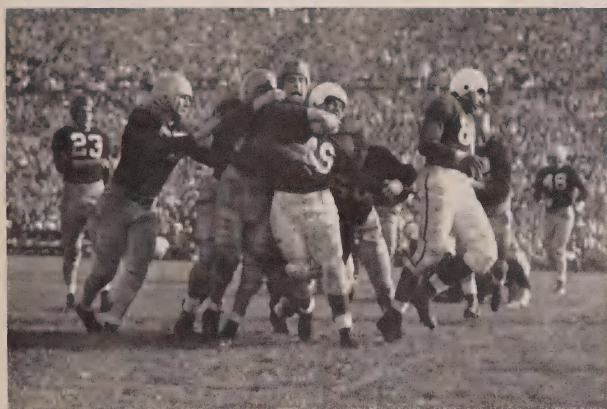

Sam Winston . . . offensive and defensive end
. . . captain of the Illinois game.

When a runner loses his interference or the interference fails to do its job the results are usually disastrous.

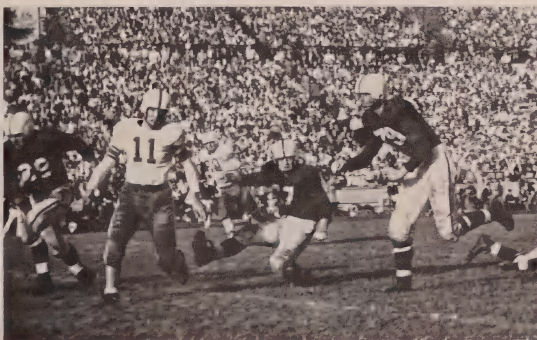

Teamwork also sets up blocks. If an accident prevents one man from getting his block another man is in position to do the job.

As an example of the sportsmanlike conduct that is to follow, the team captains shake hands as the coin is tossed to decide who will receive the ball on the kick-off.

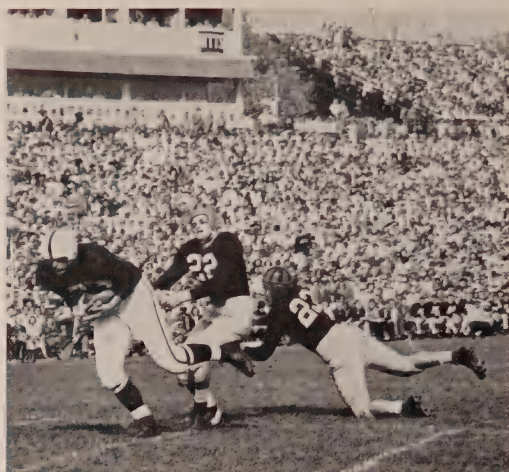

A large part of offensive play deals with an aerial attack. Completed passes often go for long gains and save a great deal of the hard work connected with running the ball.

While the defensive platoon is in action, the trainers and managers refresh the offensive players, and take care to make sure the players are in good condition to go back into the game.

The first touchdown of the afternoon brings a pained look from an N.D. player.

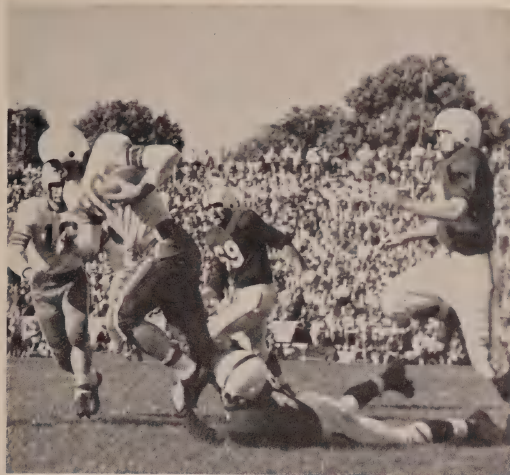

A good back carries the ball a few yards and is

Jack Dolan . . . center . . . captain of Michigan State game.

Bobby Robertson . . . halfback . . . for past two seasons elected Most Valuable Player.

Whether the opponent is merely tripped or hit hard, a tackle that brings him to the turf is successful.

brought down hard, but his mission is completed.

Good hard blocking is good football and a key block is all that is necessary to set up a touchdown.

Steve Georgakis . . . guard . . . co-captain of the Michigan game.

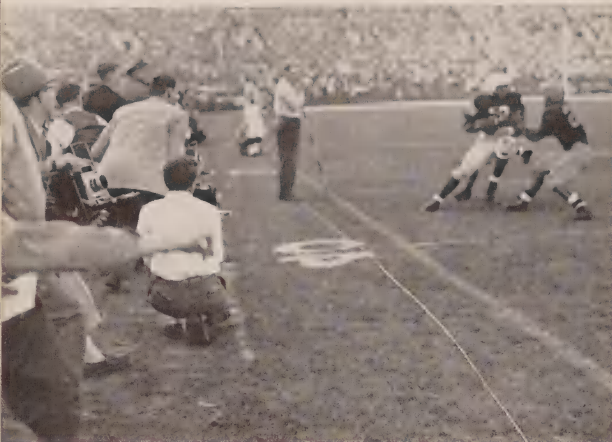

Al Tutsie . . . played two positions successfully . . . half-back and fullback.

On the opening kick-off, the back gathers in the ball and with the aid of good blocking, he runs, and runs, and runs.

A great many interesting things happen at a football game. The photographers are always on hand to get this action.

The goal line plunge is one of the most exciting plays in a football game. Ten seconds may mean victory or defeat.

A player fights his way through the line and then looks up to front of him.

Gene Gedman . . . star sophomore halfback.

see that there is no place to go . . . nothing but opponents in

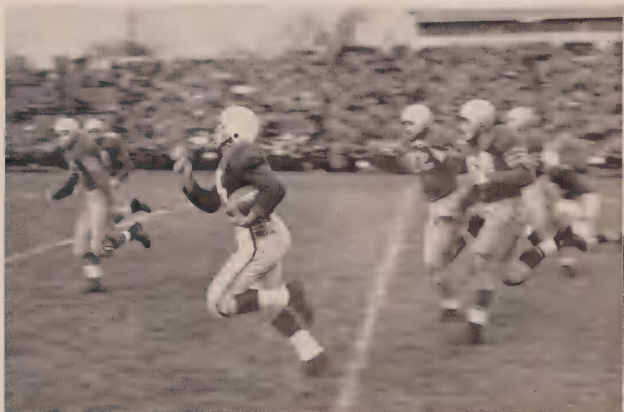

Occasionally, or quite often, as the case may be, a team is fighting with its back to the goal, 95 yards from pay dirt, and with only four downs to get out of danger.

The referees talk over the ground rules for the game. Although the fans "boo" them and argue with their decisions, their word is law.

Hugh Craton . . . end . . . co-captain of the Michigan game.

A player twists, turns, and fights to get through the line and the defensive backfield, and suddenly realizes that the opponents that he has already passed are about to catch up with him and there is nothing more he can do.

Lou D'Achille . . . quarterback . . . a great field general.

An old maxim . . . Coaches always tell a player that if he is the only man between the goal and the man with the ball, the runner should not make the touchdown, and on the other hand, they tell the runner, if there is but one man between you and the goal, you shouldn't be tackled.

Dick Olsen . . . offensive fullback . . . shows great promise for the future.

John Davis . . . defensive halfback . . .

As a player breaks into the open, the crowd becomes more and more enthusiastic, hoping for an additional score.

A good halfback will pick up his blockers so that he can be certain of a clear path to the goal.

A pass pattern is effective only if the players run it right. When a pattern is run properly, the defensive backfield is drawn to one side so that an offensive player is left open to receive a pass.

The punt is a defensive weapon and can be used to great advantage when a team is not able to make the allotted ten yards in four downs.

Bob Stebbins . . . Indiana center . . . captain of the Marquette game . . .

Cliff Anderson . . . offensive end . . . he has broken several Big Ten records.

Deception in the play makes it successful if the quarterback fakes well, and the flanker runs as though he has the ball, the fullback can plunge through the line with little trouble.

Bob Inserra . . . defensive end, mentioned as all-state.

THEY'RE

... They're great! How many times have you heard "They're great"? How many times have you made that very statement? Ten thousand people watched the final minutes of a brilliantly played and coached contest in which the Hoosiers ran their opponents into submission, and started pushing toward the door. As people do, these people chattered incessantly as they walked along. Their topic of conversation was based on what they had just witnessed, and one person alone in the midst of the milling crowd could overhear bits of this conversation coming from all directions—front, back, from the left and right—everyone was talking at the same time—from this muddled noise, one sound became significant; this sound took the form of a word; this one word was "Great."

Coach Branch McCracken, known for his "fire-wagon" brand of basketball, gave the Indiana fans an exciting and fascinating type of entertainment this past season. People always follow a winning ball club—but even more important as the reason underlying the fact that there were sell-out crowds for eight out of the ten games played in the field house is the type of basketball seen by the fans. The individual who came to see the first basketball game at the beginning of the season came to see a second, then a third, a fourth, and so on—not just because Indiana was winning but because he could see good basketball.

GREAT

Even the person who is not sports-minded came to see Branch and his team put on a show and would applaud and cheer as he would if he were watching a grand stage production.

The Hoosiers lost only three games in twenty-two starts. These three disasters occurred when they traveled to play Bradley, Minnesota, and Illinois. Three weeks after the beginning of the season, the Hoosiers were rated fourth in the nation by both the AP and UP polls. The Bradley defeat dropped Indiana to sixth place. After this setback, the team continued winning and when the end of the semester rolled around Indiana had an impressive record of thirteen wins and one loss. In Minneapolis, the Gophers sought and got revenge for the tactful defeat handed to them by the Hoosiers two weeks before.

This defeat pushed Indiana down in the national standings and gave them their first conference loss. The Hoosiers won two more games and traveled to Champaign to meet the Illini. Indiana and Illinois were tied and this was the crucial game in the race for the Big Ten title. In a rough-and-tumble game where two of the Hoosier key men fouled out, the Fighting Illini pushed Indiana farther down the scale nationally and took possession of the conference title. Indiana finished second in the Big Ten and held down seventh place in the nation. In the eyes of everyone, the Hoosiers had a very successful season.

TOSH

During his three years of varsity basketball, Bill has shown the qualities that make a ball player great. He has been fast, smooth, clever, flashy, and consistent. Several times, he has literally faked his guard off his feet; at other times, he has driven under the basket, looked as though he were going to shoot, and then passed off to a teammate to give the "Hoosiers" an easy two points.

This year Bill set a new consecutive free-throw record for the Big Ten. The record now stands at 28, and no one will ever know how high it could have gone because Bill made the last free-throw shot in conference competition and that was the one that made the new record. For this and other considerations mentioned above, "Tosh" was very important to the team and was elected "Honorary Captain" for the 1950-51 season.

BONES

Basketball centers in this day and age are big men, and Bill, only 6'2", found himself up against men often as much as a half foot taller. But his speed, his grace and cleverness, and his superb timing enabled him to overshadow all of these hardwood giants. With a snappy fake and burst of speed, Bill would drive around his guard and lay up a basket. His exceptional timing enabled him to grab rebounds from the "big boys" and speed down the floor to set up another Indiana fast break.

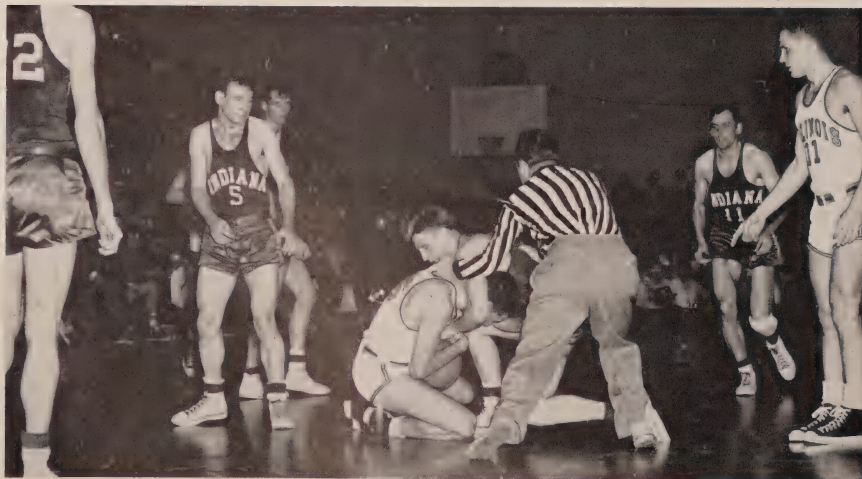

"Bones" holds many I.U. scoring records. His 792 points in his college career is tops—breaking Lou Watson's four-year mark and Ralph Hamilton's three-year record. Of these 792 points, 462 were scored in conference, also a record. His 193 points in conference competition during this past season is another mark.

Ring

Gene Ring made his basketball debut at Indiana University in the fall of 1943. He was the third sophomore on the varsity that season. Tosheff was smooth, Garrett was flashy, and Gene was the ball hawk. He was the scrappy, fighting ball player that gave the Hoosiers' basketball team the spark that characterized Indiana basketball. Gene was fast and tough. Innumerable times he drove under the basket to lay up two points, and, if he missed, he was in position ready to jump high to get his rebound. From his guard position, "Ringer" would often feed the ball into "Bones" in the pivot, setting up another Indiana basket. No matter how far ahead or behind the team was, "Ringer" was always giving his best. Always a team man, we will sorely miss Gene's scrappy brand of basketball.

Brown

Jack was a forward on the first five this season. His big asset was his powerful rebounding. Offensively, he tipped many missed Indiana shots and defensively, he cleared the boards with precision and speed, setting up Indiana's fast breaks.

Jack, an exceptional ball handler, was key man on many of Indiana's pattern plays. He also capably filled in for Garrett at the center slot when Bill was out of the game. Brownie was a jack-of-all-trades. He gave the team a great deal of balance and his return to competition undoubtedly was an important factor in the squad's fine showing during the past season.

Buckie

One of Branch McCracken's first-line reserves was Phil Buck. Phil, along with Tony Hill, were members of the "second platoon" that alternated with Tosheff and Brown at the forward posts.

Phil, with Garrett, Tosheff, and Co., moved up the ranks from 1947 through 1951. Buck often came through in the clutch with his long, accurate one-handed push shots. For a little man, he was a surprisingly good rebounder. A spirited competitor, a fine team man, Phil was a great asset to this year's squad.

Tyrie

Forty minutes of modern basketball, the fast, rough game that it is, necessitates more than five men to play. A decade or so ago a coach could get along with six or seven men. Now, he needs ten or twelve top-notch players to mold a winning team.

Ty Robbins was one of the top-notch reserves on this year's team. Cool, a good rebounder, he could be inserted into the line-up at any time and serve as a capable replacement. Primarily a guard, Ty could also play forward. Although he very seldom made the headlines, Ty was a vital cog in many Indiana victories.

Tom

Tom Satter, a senior transfer from Franklin, was another of McCracken's first-line reserves. Tom, handicapped by coming to I.U. in his senior year, earned a spot on this year's squad. He adapted himself to Indiana's style of play. If Tom had enrolled at Indiana four years ago, he might very well have been a great Hoosier star.

Masters

A member of Lafayette Jeff's championship team of 1948, selected Mr. Basketball of 1948, Bob Masters came to Indiana from the very shadow of Purdue University. The 6'3" junior was one of McCracken's starting guards all this year and part of his sophomore season. Seldom a high scorer but always consistent, Bob was a vital link in this year's squad. Bob, for the past season, has been the floor man for the team. He was the play maker, setting the offensive plays into action. Bob will be back next season.

Miranda

Living proof that a little man can still play big-time basketball — that is Sammy Miranda. Only 5'10" tall, Sammy alternated with Gene Ring as one of the starting guards. His long shots were instrumental in breaking the opponents' defensive patterns which centered around stopping Bill Garrett. In addition to being a great long-shot artist, Sammy is also famous for his dribbling. Selected as a member of this year's "Little All-American," (men 5'10" and under), Sammy will be back next year to team with Bob Masters at the guard posts.

Luft

On the gridiron in the fall, on the hardwood in winter, on the diamond in the spring — Don Luft is one of Indiana's most versatile athletes. This year, as a junior, Don played behind Bill Garrett at the center position. Following an All-American like Garrett gave Don very little opportunity to play, but, nevertheless, he worked hard and next season he may very well be I.U.'s first-string pivot man.

Hill

Tony Hill, along with Phil Buck, was a member of the first-line reserve platoon replacing Brown and Tosheff. Tony, a fine rebounder with an effective one-handed push shot, was an important member of this year's squad. A junior, Tony will return next year and should be one of the stalwarts of next year's five.

Dale Vieau, a junior, is a guard on the Indiana University ball club. He was substituted freely into the games in the latter part of the season and shows promise for the next year.

THE UP AND COMING

"The Little Boys" of Indiana University basketball have played high-school and freshman ball but have yet to gain the experience needed to play against other college players. Through a somewhat slow and tedious indoctrination procedure the tenderfeet are given this experience. After the varsity has run up a large margin over the opponents, "the little boys" are substituted into the game. This practice aids the newcomers immeasurably since they come into contact with the good players of other teams. Slowly but surely they become the seasoned players, adding to the potency of future teams at Indiana University.

CRACK—AND THEY'RE OFF

The gun is fired — Crack — and they're off. Men poised in a crouched position with muscles tense suddenly come to life to look like a herd of deer racing across a field — fast and smooth — every muscle well formed and moving as though timed by a clock.

Unlike most other athletic activities, track is a sport consisting of individual prowess. Each event in a track meet is governed by the capabilities of those persons in it, that is, the person who has more stamina, more speed, or more ability will be the victor.

Cross Country is a test of endurance. If an individual can pace himself so that he is not too fatigued at the end of several miles, he can sprint to the finish and overcome his opponent. The Cross Country has remained undefeated in dual competition for the third successive year. This year gave the team their third continuous Big State title.

Coach Fisher and the Co-captains, Lindy Feeney and "Doc" Anderson, are the brains that guide the team to success. Thus far this season the track has been undefeated in dual competition.

STEE---RIKE!

When this story went to press, the Hoosiers were packing their bags for a six-game southern tour. Coach Ernie Andres' charges faced a strenuous 29-game schedule including twelve conference contests.

Eight lettermen returned to attempt to improve their 11-won, 12-lost record of last season. Three lettermen form the nucleus of the mound staff — Bert Weber, ace relief hurler, Lefty Bob Bauer, and Don Colnitis. Last year's regular infield remains intact with the exception of second base. John Phillips, Gene Ring, and Johnny Kyle returned to first base, shortstop, and third base respectively. Although Andres lost his first string outfield through graduation, he can rely on letter winners Harry Moore, and Ray Pegram to take up the slack. Behind the plate, Arnold Bowman and Don Luft are expected to handle the chores.

Last year's record, 11 won, 12 lost for the season and 4 won, 8 lost for the conference, was no indication of the team's true power. They lost several crucial games by one-run margins and with a little luck, Indiana should have a top-notch ball club in 1951.

UGHHH

A collegiate wrestling match continues for nine minutes. It consists of three, three-minute periods. The wrestlers start the first period in a standing position, and the object of this period is to get a takedown, that is, to take the opponent to the mat and get him in a disadvantageous position. The next period begins with both contestants on their hands and knees on the mat and one wrestler has a position of advantage with an arm around the other's waist and the hand of the other arm on the opponent's elbow. The third period starts with the positions of the two wrestlers reversed and the wrestler who was in the position of disadvantage in the second period is now in the position of advantage.

The decision as to which one of the wrestlers wins is based on a point system. Points are given for a takedown—where the wrestler must take his opponent from a standing position to the mat and have him under control—for a reversal—where the wrestler comes from a position of disadvantage to a position of advantage—for a near pin—when the wrestler holds his opponent's one shoulder to the mat for three seconds—for an escape—where the wrestler breaks completely away from his opponent. During the course of a match, the points add up when the above-described events take place. The one with the highest score at the end of the nine-minute period is the winner. Of course, a pin automatically wins a match. The wrestlers get five points for winning a match by pinning their opponents and three points for winning by decision. These points are added to a total which in the end becomes the team score. This total score is compared to the opponents' total score, and the team wins or loses the match on the basis of these scores.

PHLUMPH

At the start of a race a swimmer must get into the water — and to get into the water, he must dive, walk, or fall. It is the general practice for swimmers to dive — and to us, the spectators, this sound is “PHLUMPH.” The Indiana swimming team has won four of the six meets held this year and for the first time since 1940, the “Hoosiers” defeated Purdue. Larry Meyer broke his own pool records in the 220 free style and the 200 back stroke. Frank Pisacreta set new pool records in the 50 yard free style and the 100 yard free style. The pictures on this page represent the outstanding members of the team and the man who taught them how to win.

One of the most exciting sports to watch — and yet, one that few people attend — that in a nutshell is the story of gymnastics. The team, in its third year of competition since it was disbanded during the war years, was coached by Otto Ryser. Becoming more popular with each year, gymnastics may soon develop into a favorite sport at Indiana.

The schedule follows:

NCAGU at Indianapolis
Minnesota and Ohio State at Columbus

Notre Dame and Michigan State at Bloomington

Iowa at Bloomington

With three returning lettermen with which to form a nucleus, Coach Dale Lewis has high hopes of developing another winning tennis team. Returning lettermen from last year's squad are Jim Shannon (captain), Bob Burnham, and Don McDowell. On March 26 the team left for a week-long southern trip. After returning, the squad faced a rigorous twelve-meet season climaxed by the Big Ten meet at Northwestern, May 24-26.

AMONG OURSELVES

Intramural sports at Indiana University afford the student body an opportunity to enjoy competition in athletics. Organized to provide a wide range of activities, every student finds that many events will challenge his interests. It is a vital activity which gives every student opportunity for active and wholesome self-expression in fields other than academic life.

High-spirited, close competition for the coveted Intramural Trophy characterizes the program. Evidence of this can be found in the records of past years. In the final standings of the 1949-1950 season, the tenth place team was only twenty-three points behind the leader. This means the average difference between teams was 2.3 points. Only  $1\frac{5}{6}$  points separated the competitors for first and second places. A fumble, a missed third strike, or a dubbed drive can be the difference in winning or losing the intramural championship.

A young admirer looks on as the tennis player retrieves the ball to resume the game.

Due to the lack of time to practice, the scoring in intramural games is quite often low and the scramble for the ball under the basket may mean the two points that will win the contest.

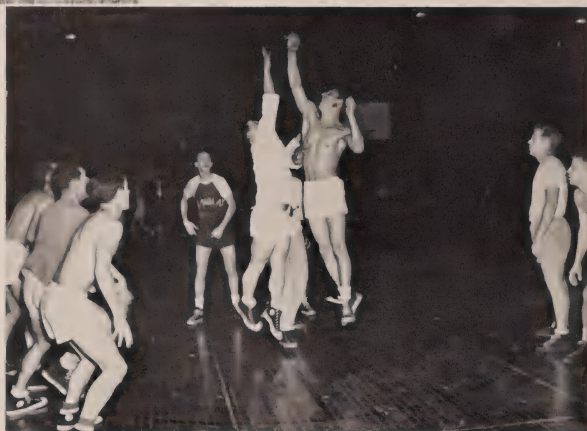

Line play in intramural football is rugged and vicious. Because no pads or helmets are used, occasionally, a broken limb is the result of a hard-fought game.

Girls are poised for shots at the target. The most arrows in the center win.

The opening tip-off, and the game is under way. Basketball is one of the major sports at Indiana University.

Swimming is another popular event in the realm of intramural activity. Here, the women are in the finals of the tournament. Fans anxiously await the results.

The Intramural programs of both the men and the women are organized in a similar fashion. The participants are classified into leagues where, in competition, a league winner is chosen. Then a play-off tournament is put into effect to eliminate all contestants except the ultimate champion of the sport. This system and the use of single and multiple elimination tournaments characterize the intramural programs.

There are two significant differences, however, in the two programs. While the men have a grand champion for all intramural sports, the coeds have a champion of each sport. This allows that there be many more winners and, thereby, a greater interest is developed. The fact that there is a greater interest is important because it ties into the other major difference. The women participate in intramurals for interest alone. There are no awards given to act as an incentive that might create interest in such a program.

The coed sports events offered are golf, tennis, swimming, basketball, bowling, volleyball, Ping-pong, softball, and badminton. Added to these, the men take part in track, cross-country, wrestling, football, and handball.

Girl's rules for basketball are the reason for a slower game and lower scoring. Here is an attempt for two points.

A pass completed and three opponents converge to stop him for a short gain.

Bowling is not only a popular pastime at I.U. Here coeds vie for top honors in an intramural contest.

Will he catch the ball? A short gain in a game of close competition can mean the difference between winning or losing the game.

The purpose of Panhellenic is to maintain a high plane of fraternity life and interfraternity relationship with the college and to cooperate with college authorities in their efforts to maintain high social and scholastic standards throughout the whole college. Furthermore, it is to provide a medium through which questions of mutual interest and concern to the college and the fraternity world may be discussed. The fulfilling of this purpose has given Panhellenic a full and successful year. They have, as a group composed of two representatives from each sorority, discussed and solved problems affecting individual houses, as well as those of consequence to the group as a whole.

Each year Senior Panhellenic gives four scholarships based on high grades, need, and leadership. In addition to these, a scholarship cup is given to the sorority maintaining the highest scholastic standing. The group chose to support again the same orphan they did last year as they felt they had really adopted her.

Junior Panhellenic is composed of a representative from each pledge class. Basically its purpose is the same as its senior.

It's not the Alpha Chi house but the house of music! Refrains from the "uke" are everywhere. Talents of all the wearers of the golden lyre were blended to give our Storybook Ball on November eleventh—very nice! Much later in the year, we held our spring formal in honor of the new pledges. Once every month during the school year, the Carnation Banquet was held to honor one girl for a particular virtue.

We were proud to have the president of Mortar Board, the president of the Y.W.C.A., the president of Red Cross, and three members of Town Hall Board furthering house interests in outside activities.

As for "play" activities, our pledges strung sheets from the Delta Chi house to the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house! A damaging water fight followed; eventually, all housing units joined in a walkout and snake dance. Quite a boress!

In commemoration of our one-hundredth national anniversary and our own chapter's twenty-fifth anniversary we held a Centennial Ball on May 4. The dance, held at the Graham Hotel, was a big success with alums and all of the chapter members attending. Invitations were also extended to our chapters at Purdue and Hanover.

Remember our parties?—an open house for our mothers, those after the home games in the fall, and one on Founder's Day—the barbecues with the Delts at the home of one of our alums—four wonderful record dances—bridge parties interrupted by that horn—even a Christmas party to start the holidays off right.

One of our biggest moments was the Senior Banquet—what a hard time we had selecting the outstanding senior for the award!

Alpha Delta Pi roddesses this year were a vice-president of the W.R.A., a vice-president of Gamma Alpha Chi, two Y.W.C.A. cabinet members, one Alpha Lambda Delta, and two members of Oceanides.

"Pioneers" is the word for the Alpha Gamma Deltas, who this year blazed the trail for a new fraternity row north of Jordan Avenue on Tenth Street. Now in our fourth year on the Indiana University campus, we were the ones to brave the woods when, with much tree-chopping and stump-digging, we moved into our new home at 1401 East Tenth Street.

Dancing to the music of Clay Phillips at our annual Spring formal, the Christmas party, snowball fights, recognition "bean and steak" dinners (steak for those with two-point averages and beans for those with grades below), pledge walkouts, Mother's Day Banquet—these were just a few of the good times for the Beta Delta girls.

Alpha Gam gals were not out of circulation although "out in the woods," for they provided such campus "rodesses" as secretary of Panhellenic Association, secretary of the Junior Class, and the head of the Careers Conference Committee.

Although we don't have a house of our own, we manage to have a meeting once a week in the Student Building. Our girls live in either Elm or Lincoln. It really isn't hard for us to get together. All we do is use the phone to round up the girls, and the boress is underway! These may take different forms, ranging from a quiet bridge to a noisy jam session or a sentimental serenade.

The theme of Ivy is carried throughout all of Alpha Kappa Alpha: it is the key word. Our pin has three ivy leaves—our dances always carry out the ivy theme—even our songs are about ivy. We give each of our new initiates a potted ivy plant to raise.

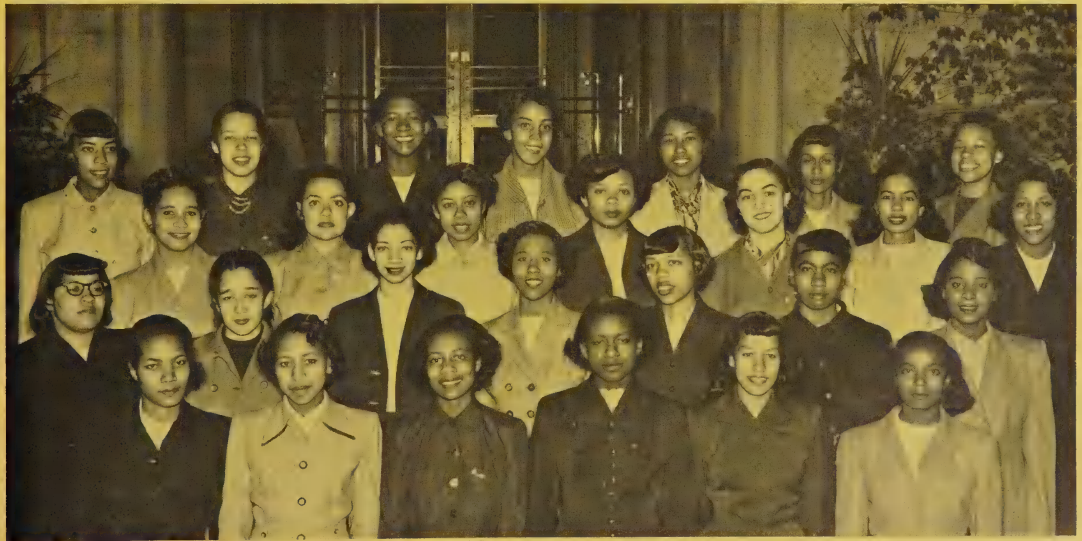

Each year we have two banquets—one to honor the initiates and the other to honor our graduating seniors.

The patio pool of the AOPi house is one of its oldest and most cherished traditions. New initiates always have their Rose Dinner around the pool; every new pin girl is tossed into the pool instead of the ever-lovin' shower, and best of all, it serves as a wishing well for anyone who wants to make a wish for the price of a penny. (The money is collected at the end of the year and used for philanthropic work.)

The social season of AOPi was complete with the annual Snow Ball in January and the Spring Pledge Formal. In October, AOP's and their dates dressed as their suppressed desires for the "Judgment Day" dance.

On campus, AOPi had a student senator, the campus editor of the Daily Student, circulation manager of the Pin, a member of Mortar Board, and queen of the Skull and Crescent Sweater Hop.

A change of scenery set the mood in the Alpha Phi house this year, for every day was "moving day." The girls just couldn't agree where those twin red chairs should go.

When the new addition is completed, things will be different, but this year — when it was cleaning day, 7:30 class or no 7:30 class, the Alpha Phi's had to rise and shine, for Tom's window washers always arrived bright and early. "Cooking in" did have its advantages. Those spaghetti dinners were really delicious. After serenades, there was nothing like that soft floor to catch a few hours of sleep. Well, it has been fun!

Social affairs for the year included the annual "Forget-me-not Formal" and the Mother's Day tea, both held in the spring. In the midst of a full calendar, the Alpha Phi's found time for extracurricular activities. Prominent offices held by Alpha Phi's were Director of Senior Class, vice-president of the French Club, and A.W.S. Council.

Early in the fall, the Alpha Xi Deltas all participate in what they call "fraternity week." This includes "turnabout day" at which time the pledges play actives and the actives must become lowly pledges, a scholarship dinner honoring all members who made a 2.00 or over, and a "sorority mother-daughter day." Climaxing the week is the initiation of the pledges.

The traditional Rose Formal, held every spring, honors the new pledges. At this time the Alpha Xi house is transformed into a mass of roses. The winter formal, Dad's Day, held in the fall, and Mother's Day, held in the spring, completed the social agenda for the year.

The Alpha Xi Deltas boast the only "open kitchen" on the I.U. campus. Sunday evenings find the girls making peanut butter sandwiches, and after study table, the girls usually raid the icebox for a midnight snack.

Although the Chi O's did study this semester, and more than just a little, they still managed to find the time, not to mention the inclination, to boress and run back and forth between Jordan Avenue and the Commons. Add to that the fact that they sponsored their annual "Stardust" and Spring Pledge Dance, and it equals one busy house. These so-called "larger" events, however, cannot begin to compete for the Chi O's affections with such functions as the Waiters' Exchange and the Steak and Bean Dinner.

Let it not be thought that the Chi O's did nothing but party all year, however. Repeat: they did study, and they were out on campus in activities. Seen any starry-eyed Tri Deltas lately? From all reports the Tri Delt roof is crawling with future astronomers. Seems as if the Tri Deltas believe in keeping their star and crescent prevalent in everything they do.

The house lounge is everyone's late-hours room. They not only study there, but they sleep, eat, and play cards. If anyone isn't around to get that phone call—they know where to look—that old habitat, the lounge.

The Tri Deltas pulled a "switch." Their "Delta Barberettes," a barbershop quartet, dress as men. They don slacks and waiter jackets to convey that gay-'20 feeling.

The fall pledge dance had atmosphere in its "Mardi Gras" theme. The pledges had a dance all to themselves, as the actives proudly looked on.

The Tri Deltas rated many activities this past year. Among these were president of A.W.S., president of W.R.A., president of Panhellenic, president of Junior Panhellenic, a cheerleader, and two Mortar Board members.

Nothing like being a worm — so the Delta Phi Epsilon pledges said to the actives one day. On their "Turnabout Day," the actives cringed in dismay when they had to act like worms. It's a wonder the pledges got that party after it was all over.

"Tennis, anyone?" The D Phi E's really like that game. Someone is always wanting a tennis partner. Even in the cold winter? "Why not?" they say.

The Spring Formal came on Mother's Day Weekend. "See, Ma, a dance just like you used to have!" Mother just shook her head helplessly.

Then there was the Waiters' Turnabout. The executive council served the waiters. Everyone concerned got a big kick out of that. The waiters found out how it was.

The D Phi E's activities included the president and corresponding secretary of the Social Service Club, president of the Student Religious Cabinet, and the recipient of the Bryan Scholarship.

"Hickory Dickory Dock," was the theme of Delta Zeta's Fall Carnival booth. And, it won for us the trophy for the most original theme. It's a wonder that the girls handled those mice.

The fathers really rated this fall. They came down for the Marquette game and stayed overnight. The next day the daughters held a banquet for them. In the spring the mothers' turn came. They had a dinner and a playful skit.

"D. Z. Dreamland" was the theme of the winter formal. Decorations were "dreamy" in their cozy feeling, contrasted with the cold night outside. The Spring Pledge Dance was an exciting night for the pledges, who were shown off to the campus.

Our new housemother enjoyed the year with the girls. After being a fraternity housemother, it was a nice feeling to have those "woman-to-woman" talks.

The Delta Zetas entered in activities full swing. They had the secretary of Omicron Delta, a Mortar Board member, office manager of the Crimson Bull, vice-president of F.T.A., and vice-president of the Home Ec Club.

With the donning of caps and gowns, another class of Thetas put aside the yellow slickers and sou'wester — no more to trudge up the side stairs and check those all-important pigeonholes for mail, no more to chase those naughty pledges when they disappear, leaving only their favorite trademark from the slaughter house — a glassy-eyed cow's head.

But well remembered will be the many times we bedecked the walls with congratulation signs for Theta beauty queens, the riotous parade and the midnight invasion of the city square after the Notre Dame game, and the Christmas spirit enhanced by Santa's Toyland at our winter dance, with the balustrades of the wide stairs entwined with spicy greenery and colorful, friendly lights.

With spring came the debut of our new pledges at the dance in their honor, the annual sunning in the back yard, and the parties, skits and banquet for our Parent's Week End. Also the year's reign of our activity women came to an end — our Mortar Board member, the social chairman of A.W.S., the chairman of the Student Religious Cabinet, and the copy editor of the Arbutus.

The scholarship cup was the dividend for the many hours of hard work and study which we Kappas applied to our books. We did find time in between our studies for our traditional snowball fight with the Phi Psis, the Kappas winning, of course.

Social activities kept us busy. This year we had our fathers down for the week end during the fall and our mothers down in the spring. In between times we had our "secret desires" pledge dance, the Monmouth Duo, given in conjunction with the Pi Phis, and our spring pledge dance. Even with all this, we still participated in campus activities. Two of our members served on Mortar Board, one was vice-president of the Y.W.C.A., and we were especially proud to have a girl who wears the Kappa key elected Homecoming Queen for 1950.

Our Joe Nights, every Friday night, with our crazy hats and baggy jeans, will be missed by all of us this summer and by the seniors for some time to come. Some of us came to dinner wearing clothes from the flapper era. With some it was our baby bonnets from childhood, and a lot of us wore our white sailor hats from Pod Day, turnabout day.

When the final days came around, we seniors hated to think back over all the good times come to an end — our Senior Banquet just past — the spring and winter formals, the winter formal being "Crystal Ball." We all danced to the music of Johnnie Stone while sparkling snowflakes embellished the room. We cannot forget our roddesses — one Mortar Board, treasurer of the Senior Class, secretary-treasurer of Sigma Alpha Iota and secretary of the Spanish Club.

Homecoming was really complete this year for us, for I.U. not only won the football game, but Pi Beta Phi took top honors in Homecoming decorations. Then, for the Notre Dame game we invited our fathers down, and all of us spent a week end that we will never forget.

Our loud speaker was originally installed for "beaux" to call their little "Pi Phi arrows," but this year something new was added. Promptly at 7:00 P.M. a sweet, melodious voice would admonish us, "It's quiet hours, Pi Phis." We do find time for social activities, however. Included on our calendar for the year was a Lollypop Hop pledge dance, the Monmouth Duo, given with the Kappas, the spring pledge dance, Mother's week end, exchange dinners, and cookie shins.

In campus activities we were very proud to have the girls who wear the golden arrow as president of Tophets, associate editor of the Arbutus, art editor of the Arbutus, and the president of our pledge class as president of Junior Panhellenic. We were especially proud when our candidate for Arbutus queen was selected as one of the five finalists.

A spree of interior decorating inaugurated our year, as 316 Jordan Avenue was transformed into a den of Dorothy Drapers, and the rooms blossomed forth in all shades of the rainbow. Somehow we got as much paint on ourselves as on the walls—needless to say, our turpentine bill was tremendous!

Lish Henderson played for our initiation dance, which was the high light of our first semester; spring brought our eagerly awaited State Day formal. Pledge parties, turnabout day, and house boresses helped to liven things up—will we ever forget the day our pledges stole our loafers and saddles, and the actives were forced to start a heels-to-class fad?

This year our house turned out future teachers by the score—no doubt the same lesson plans will be used all over Indiana! Our girls were active on A.W.S. Board of Standards and Council, and the Greek Week treasurer was a Sigma Delta Tau.

"Mardi Gras Madness" set the mood for the Sigmas' fall dance, and the gaily painted masks later made unique boudoir decorations. Much to our dismay, our homecoming decorations, a corsage box encasing two orchids, proved too fragile for October zephyrs, and cellophane, crepe paper, and papier-mâché orchids collapsed in a heap—it was beautiful while it lasted!

Other memorable events were the faculty tea for our national president, Mrs. Swift Lowry; the annual Christmas tree-trimming party; and the pledge party, Gypsy Tea Room—where did they dig up those fortunes?

Lest we forget—the day our basement was deluged, and dinner was served by barefoot waiters, or the time a certain fraternity stole our pin sign and transported it to our Purdue chapter. Weren't we surprised to receive their card: "Hope you enjoyed the pin half as much as we do!"

Our girls were active on campus in music honoraries, Women's Recreation Association Advisory Board, and the Daily Student.

The Theta Phi Alphas in their second year on campus excitedly returned to their new house on East 4th Street—the house of the dark-blue walls and the pink piano.

In spite of the name, "The Barbershop Ball," no cutting remarks can be made about the successful opening of the Theta Phi Alphas social season. Continuing on the line of more frivolous festivities were the gala Christmas Dance and the White Rose Formal, which blossomed out in April. Probably the most sentimental event of the year was the Senior Banquet, held at a time when the seniors finally realized they wouldn't be back next year.

Among the various activities of the Theta Phi Alphas was assisting The Glenmary Missions, a Catholic charitable organization, and sponsoring a Christmas party for underprivileged children. Theta Phi Alphas were also very active in campus organizations, and one of the offices their members held was the presidency of Newman Club.

The Zeta Tau Alphas never worry about opening windows during baseball season, or on any warm day — the Theta Chi baseball “pro’s” take care of that.

Turnabouts were very popular this year. The pledges gave the actives a “kiddy party,” and in return the actives entertained the pledges at their annual Christmas party. Then there was the day the ZTA’s donned the waiters’ uniforms and served the ex-waiters in very fine style.

The social calendar was filled with dances, exchange dinners, and parents’ day, which was held the week end of the Notre Dame game. However, the Zetas all agree that the “Twenty-three Skidoo” pledge dance was just about tops.

The Zetas also found time to participate in extracurricular activities. Three ZTA’s were members of Pleiades, while another was vice-president of Tophets and another president of Canterbury Club.

The fourteen presidents of Women’s Residence Halls combine their ideas and the ideas of the girls in their dorms to establish the highest governing body for W.R.H.

The president of W.R.H. leads the executives in their work of coordinating the work of the halls and sharing responsibilities as well as opportunities.

Each spring, the new and old presidents of the dormitories have an all-day session. The old presidents give the new ones ideas and tell them a little of their responsibilities. A baseball game between the two usually follows.

The coordinate groups of W.R.H. help perform specialized tasks. The close cooperation of the halls helps to promote friendliness instead of competition.

Miss Margaret Wilson, director of counseling and activities in W.R.H. and Miss Catherine Williams, counselor in Memorial Hall fills the advisory positions at the weekly meetings.

Cedar Hall is the co-op dorm in Smithwood. There is no receptionist nor any maid service, which lends an air of delightful informality to the dorm.

Recently some of the girls were mopping one of the halls in Cedar — at 12:30 at night — and discussing the installation of a bowling alley. The question, "Where to put it?"

The majority of the girls in Cedar are music majors, and do they ever harmonize! They have a string quartet which played for a faculty tea. A few private record collections really add to the musical atmosphere.

In the lounge there is a bust done by one of the girls in the dorm of one of her friends. This proves they aren't all music lovers.

One of the girls in the dorm owns a wire recorder, which she turned on one evening at a house council meeting when no one was looking. The whole meeting was recorded, and later that evening was played at a house meeting.

"Fireside Football" began our activities for the year. We sat around the fire, ate apples, played cards or knitted and listened to the "away" games — a pleasant way to back the team!

Many of us were a little shy when the year began. But the "pixie week" and the dinner for us girls in Forest helped us become acquainted with our friends next door.

Who could forget the mixers — coke parties, general boresses or our new song, "Of Thee We Sing, Forest"? With the seniors will go the memory of our banquet given for them.

We had lots of fun gathering clippings of our roddesses and taking pictures of our friends for our dorm yearbook.

With the coming of a new year we hope to have established a new tradition — an annual faculty tea.

The girls of Laurel Hall were proud of their record this year. They were "tops" in their participation in campus activities and kept a well-filled social calendar. Somewhere along the line there was a little studying done. That they have any love for the books, however, is rather doubtful; the two large bookshelves in the lounge, which should be filled with books devoted to the cultivation of the intellect, are instead artistically adorned with a variety of "tropical" vines.

In the fall the annual Fascinating Follies were held. Several of the men's residence units were invited over for an evening of dancing and entertainment. Several exchange dinners throughout the year and the Faculty Tea also highlighted the social activities.

The Laurelites are well represented on the campus in outside activities. The secretary of the W.R.H. Executive Board, a Mortar Board member and a student senator are a few of the prominent positions held by Laurel girls.

Our 1950 memories of Lincoln House — only two years old — have already become traditions and customs.

The December formal, our Winter Wonderland Ball — snowflakes, snowballs, and an igloo gave the illusion of fairyland — even a Santa Claus with bargains from Woolworth's as presents for our dates.

The main event of our second semester — our annual Monte Carlo party — the house transformed into a gambling den — roulette and poker tables upstairs — and downstairs a bar, but only grape juice — cigarette girls and a photographer.

Things we'll never forget: the gentle chimes which first announce dinner, soon followed by the cowbell signifying "Come and get it!" — Stella, our second mother, who listens to our troubles and peeks at our mail — and last but not least, our recipient of a Mortar Board scholarship!

Though the housing office broke up Linden at the end of the first semester, we who lived in it that first semester will remember the little things about it. How could we forget the two girls who painted their room a bright chartreuse? The paint cost them eighteen dollars, the university forfeited their twenty-five-dollar room deposits, and then they didn't even get to live in the room past final exam time!

We missed the girl who had that comfortable chair from home in her room, the girls who practiced their modern dance in the corridor, the way the washer always broke down, and the new songs that were always coming out about Linden Hall.

Linden Hall had a representative on the A.W.S. Board of Standards, two girls on the staff of the Shadow, and an associate editor of the Y-Angle.

Other halls have had luck, but not like Maple! Nearly every week last fall someone from Maple was involved in an accident. First there was an appendectomy, then an automobile accident. During the Notre Dame week end, three girls were hurt. Later a girl fell down the fire escape and another cut her wrist on a fish bowl.

Bojo and Maplette were other unforgettable things. Bojo was a large, understuffed clown, and Maplette was a blonde, blue-eyed doll with a smirk. They belonged to a girl in the dorm who kept them for luck. But, they were adopted by the rest of the hall.

This year Maple had representatives in many activities. Living in the dorm was the vice-president of the Sophomore Class, a member of the I.S.A. Council, and a representative to the Indiana University Foundation. Four girls in Maple were in the top twenty of the candidates in the Arbeauty contest.

"We love our elevator but it's awfully temperamental," is a portion of a poem partially describing the only elevator in Women's Residence Halls for the convenience of the students. The mailbox just outside attracts many people to another trademark for our dorm, the archway between East and West Memorial which sometimes serves as an entrance-way for people into the Quad.

Our Social Planning Committee had one social event ready for us each week. The event which was especially liked was the Christmas program. We drew names and during Pixie Week we did errands and favors for each other, and we ended the week by exchanging gifts at our Christmas party.

In keeping with our castle architecture, we contributed snapshots of our friends and clipped articles* from the papers of our roommates for the Towers, the dorm yearbook. Whenever we come back to I.U., we can see the record of our college events and friends.

In February our open house with Sycamore for the four dignitaries of the stage was a huge success. Our faculty tea helped promote better relationships between our pros and the Morrison girls. And then there were the open houses after the games.

"It's Always Fun at Morrison," is the key expression at our hall. Our freshmen will remember their pods—the bedmaking—shoeshining—and finally the snake dance through the dorm when pods were burned.

We have the president of Pamarada, president of Blue Crest, vice-president of A.W.S., several members of Mortar Board, Tophets and Theta Sig—more roddesses than most halls.

Our Senior Banquet ended our activities for the year. In keeping with our key expression, we had a razz banquet. We received ridiculous gifts and we seniors retaliated with senseless skits.

Will the freshmen ever forget the green pods or the sophomores who encouraged them to wear them? Remember the consequences? The freshman boress was great fun.

None of us will forget the pajama parties — the mixers — exchange dinners — the Halloween party — the ukes — Bloomington rain — or quarries in the Spring.

Like almost everyone else, we contributed to University Sing. We had our share of roddesses and grades were good. We were present at the W.R.H. Spring Festival with our mothers. Of course, there was the scholarship dinner.

The traditional Rose Banquet climaxed the year. At this event underclassmen as well as counselors paid their respects to the seniors.

All the girls of Sycamore will long be singing — “Way down in the bottom of our hearts we got a feelin’ for you, Sycamore, for you.”

The Interfraternity Council, composed of the presidents of all social fraternities on campus, strives to promote and perpetuate the best interests of Indiana University fraternity relations and the organized students, in general.

In view of this, the council has progressed far this year. The fraternities have agreed to give up the traditional "hell week" for constructive projects. So far, community work has been done for such organizations as Christian Center, Salvation Army, and the Red Cross by the pledges of the various fraternities.

Another outstanding project of the council this year has been the co-sponsorship of the Greek Week with the women's Panhellenic Association. The high light of the week was the Greek Week Dance when Hal McIntyre played for the many couples. In the spring, the annual Scholarship Banquet was held and the awards were made to the men with the highest scholarship in each fraternity. Last year, the council was proud to say that the all-fraternity scholastic average topped the all-men's average on campus for the first time in many years.

The Interfraternity Pledge Council, composed of the pledge presidents of all the Greek letter fraternities on campus, has as its primary purpose, the promotion of interfraternity co-operation. In order to unite the various pledge classes on campus, the I.F.P.C. sponsors several activities throughout the school year.

A general walkout of all pledges was climaxed by a green pod burning session this past spring. To promote scholarly achievements, the I.F.P.C. awarded a trophy to the pledge class with the highest grade average on campus. Mixers and smokers were held, during which time pledges were urged to avail themselves of the opportunity to make new acquaintances. In cooperation with their big brothers, the I.F.C., the I.F.P.C. will contain pictures and articles about different functions sponsored jointly by these two groups. This brochure was entered in a contest to compete with those submitted by other colleges and universities throughout the nation.

The aim of the I.F.P.C. is that the pledges will realize the responsibilities and obligations to the fraternity system and to the fraternities that will be theirs at the end of the period of pledgship.

Sounds of barking and yelping at the Acacia house on Third Street told everyone that Yellow Dog time had come . . . those three hectic days of trial, work, and discomfort for the Ac-Ac pledges. Battles with the pledges of the neighboring frats were not uncommon during those three days because everyone wanted the yellow dog.

With Spring came the annual Acacia Spring Lawn Carnival. The big stone house and the yard in front were filled with carnival decorations while the rushees looked on with amazement.

In activities, Acacia was well represented with a man on Union Board, the vice-president of the junior class, the president of Delta Sigma Pi, a member of the Student Senate, president of Insurance Club, president of Finance Club, president of Collegiate Chamber of Commerce, president of Arnold Air Society, treasurer of Y.M.C.A., and the secretary of Blue Key.

The 1950-51 school year saw the Alpha Phi Alphas start activities with a dance in honor of the new pledges.

What with all the books to crack we found time to give a Christmas party with our sisters of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority and have a combined group in the University Sing.

Although interwoven between classes were dances, teas, serenades, boresses, and lost week ends, the high points of the school year were the fall and spring initiations.

The lost week end found the active members not hunting for bottles — they were scrambling around to find bed linen and beds — thanks to the little pledges.

We are proud to have a member in the capacity of president of N.A.A.C.P. and a member on the Student Senate and Board of Acons.

When we concluded the year with the selection of our Sweetheart at our "Annual Spring Formal," we sniffed the roses and said, "We sure had a good year."

The class of 1951 left its stamp with us as every ATO can testify. The occupants of Room 3, for example, started the "colorful-room" trend, and we are sure that those fabulous travel posters and striped beach chair will go with them. The senior party could never be the same — an affair wildly reminiscent of the Roaring Twenties.

No matter how we complained, the wee hours will be strangely still without the frequent bar-rages of firecrackers. For the loss of a great softball pitcher we have no solution; nor do we for our losing the campus's best piano and bass men. The third floor's textile merchant was no less important in the house picture, and with him will go his witticisms and his "quality-goods."

ATO's being presidents of ADS, Marketing Club, Skull & Crescent, Spanish Club, and the Bachelor of the Year was distinctly 1950-1951. Even Harpo, the abstract statue, brought us a measure of publicity unlike other years. The between-semesters trip to Aspen, Colorado, was also new for the ATO's.

Feet stamped, fiddles whined, and couples in plaid shirts and jeans flashed by. Gone was the dignified air — it was the pledge barn dance. But the pledges' day came when the actives pitched in and gave them their formal. The high light of the year as always was the Triad. The Betas, Phi Deltas, and Sigma Chis, decked in their formal gear, waltzed their dates across the floor of Alumni Hall.

With the spring came the Underworld Dance. How shocked the coed's mother would have been to see her daughter, looking every bit the part of a gun moll, being escorted by a thug into a dive — the Beta house.

Scholarship had its place in the house, the president of Phi Eta Sigma wearing the diamond. All Betas are not Republicans; one Beta active is the president of the Jackson Club.

Betas sat around their newly decorated bum room in a quandary — who would receive the coveted Omar Award? The requirements were stiff. The man must be an active, have a low grade average, a green shirt, be able to soft-shoe, whistle, sing, and participate in sports. Who got the stale loaf of Omar bread? Ask a Beta!

Remember the Dad's Day dinner after the Ohio State game and Mother's Day dinner in the spring — and the skits with both the actives and the pledges entertaining them? The pledges, dressed as women, acted as waitresses for the dinner.

This year we had two big banquets. One was held for the varsity basketball members and coaching staff. This talk was heard at our banquet: "That sure was a close one — remember that shot? We certainly had some stars this year." The other was our Senior Banquet at which time we awarded our scholarship cup and our senior cup, which is given to the outstanding senior in our fraternity.

Annually we give two formals. This year "Blue Champagne" was the theme of our pledge dance, which was given in the fall. Our final dance of the year was held in honor of Delta Chi's graduating seniors.

After a fire last October, the Delt shelter is now all ours — every brick of it. The fire was the burning of the mortgage that hung over our heads for eleven long years. The present house, built in 1939, is the result of another fire fifteen years ago that burned down the old house. At the same time we burned the mortgage, we celebrated the eightieth anniversary of the founding of our chapter.

Sunday evenings found our "Gourmet Club" preparing rare delicacies for us. Among the specialties were shrimp cocktail, caviar "supreme," and, of course, peanut butter sandwiches. If our experimental chefs weren't too successful, we could always count on our faithful mascot, King-crested Pearl Diver.

Representing Delta Tau Delta in sports was one of the brothers who played on the varsity football squad and one who was a member of the varsity basketball team. We also had the president of Phi Delta Phi, and the Commodore of the Sailing Club.

Carrying approximately one hundred students at a pep rally last fall is typical of the many duties that the Delta Upsilon 1923 Stutz fire engine can be seen performing for us. The old engine also played a major role in bringing about the success of our annual costume dance, the "Fireman's Fling." The house was in such a state that some of the rushees weren't too sure whether we were preparing for a dance or were recovering from a fire.

The "Rose Ball," our big spring formal, meant a lot of work for us as we decorated the front room with ferns, trellises, and, of course, hundreds of roses; but our efforts paid off with a dance that was one of our best.

During warm weather our D.U. "lounge lizards" would crawl out of doors and, sitting on our front bank, would add to their social curricula by whistling at beautiful coeds who were passing by. However, not all of our brothers chose to spend their time this way. Several were instead making a name for themselves in activities. Among our activity men were the president of the Board of Aeons, president of the Junior Class, and the Campus Life Editor and the Sports Editor of the Arbutus.

"There's a great day a-comin'" for the Kappa Alpha Psi. The year started with high hopes of having a new house. National has made the preliminary plans, and if all goes well, by next fall "the big move" can be made. The house will be in the new fraternity section and will be large enough to house the entire chapter, with even enough room for Laddie Kappa, the collie pup mascot.

The high light of the year was the provincial dance, held in Alumni Hall. This social event was given in conjunction with thirteen other Kappa Alpha Psi chapters, which converged on the I.U. campus and turned the affair into a howling success.

Kappa Alpha Psi is distinguished from most houses on campus in that it is an Alpha chapter of a national fraternity. Annually a banquet is held here to commemorate its founding forty years ago.

The ever-present rivalry with the Alpha Phi Alphas, although somewhat overshadowed by building plans, was not forgotten. Football, basketball, and scholarship contests were held, with the loser footing the bill for a big party.

This year marks the silver anniversary of Kappa Delta Rho. To start the year off right, we had our "Den" remodeled, and now the floor is a loud checkerboard of orange and blue. Also, we added a new television set to our living room.

The pledge dance and the winter formal were both very successful, but our favorite dance of the year was the Rodeo Dance, given in the spring. In carrying out the theme, we even delivered our invitations on horseback.

Although our annual Venison Banquet, given for the alums, and the Founder's Day Banquet were both lots of work, we all felt that they really topped everything we had had in previous years.

In activities we could boast the president of Y.M.C.A. and the captain of the I.U. swimming team, who is also an All-American swimmer. We are also very proud of our pledges, who had Knight House for their project.

Every year the actives challenge the pledges to a game in both football and basketball. The loser must then give the winner a party. We felt that this year has really been an "anniversary year."

In the middle of November the Kappa Sig pledges sadly viewed the remains of the pledge dance, the Granary Ball, which had been held the night before. Pumpkins, hay, corn husks, and other Hoosier flora littered the house. The only room which had been spared was the new women's room which had been completely redecorated this year for lady friends and guests.

This year for the first time the Kappa Sigs gave a Halloween party for children living in apartments on each side of the house. There were dunking for apples, playing of games, and eats for all.

Well-scrubbed little faces had smiles across them as once again the Kappa Sigs teamed with the Chi Omegas to add cheer to the Christmas of many underprivileged children.

A fairly new tradition was revived this year as the Kappa Sigma men donned yellow socks en masse—a quick glance at the feet on Wednesday being a sure means of identification.

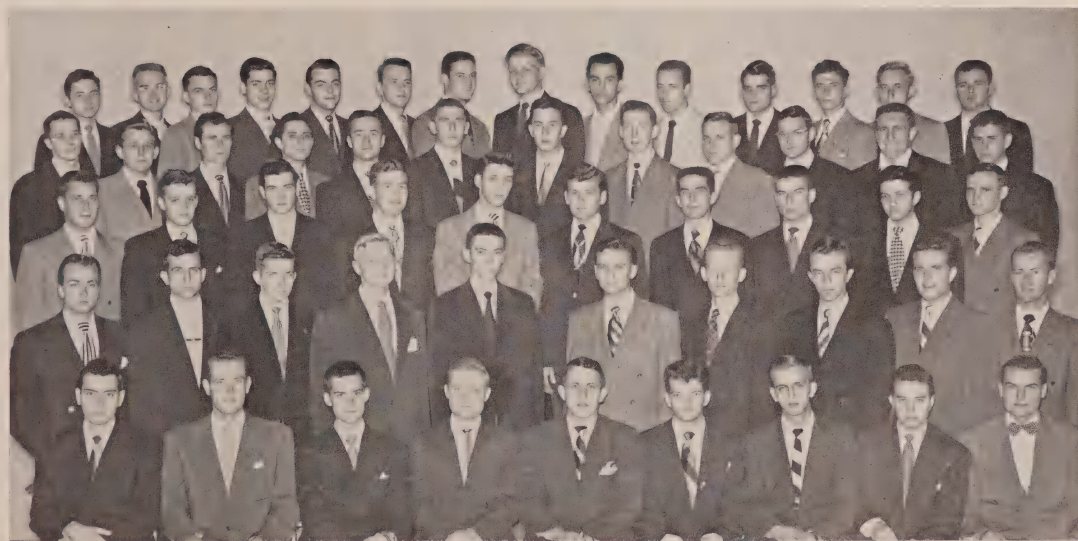

The house may claim among its activities men the head of the Cheerleaders Conference, and the Editor and Assistant Business Manager of the Arbutus.

The fall of 1950 found the men of Lambda Chi opening their doors to another year filled with experiences that would not soon be forgotten.

The traditional White Rose Formal was given on the house's new tennis courts. The decorations were full of spring in their lattice-work fences and boughs of flowers. "Hades Hop" was the theme of the fall pledge dance. One can guess what those decorations were.

The Lambda Chi's have that I.U. spirit. One of their boys is chairman of the Hoosier Boosters Club.

The Lambda Chi's are proud that they are one of the two houses on campus to have a housemother living in the house. They were even more proud of the fact that their housemother was honored at a National Conclave. She was chosen as the outstanding Lambda Chi housemother in the nation.

For the second year the Lambda Chis sponsored a gigantic Easter Egg Hunt for Bloomington children, twelve years old and under. The boys bought and colored the four hundred eggs themselves. No one was left out, as the eggs were given to all who didn't find any. This is one of the Lambda Chis' biggest projects.

The men of Zeta Epsilon chapter of Omega Psi Phi moved into their own house on Eighth Street the second semester of last year after they had become a recognized fraternity on campus. Although new on the I.U. campus, Omega is a strong national fraternity with 195 chapters throughout the country.

The opening of school found the Omegas rushing around the house readying it for the onslaught of football season. When the rapid series of home football games was over, a round of informal get-togethers was held over coffee and doughnuts. Plans were made to enlarge and build up the fraternity.

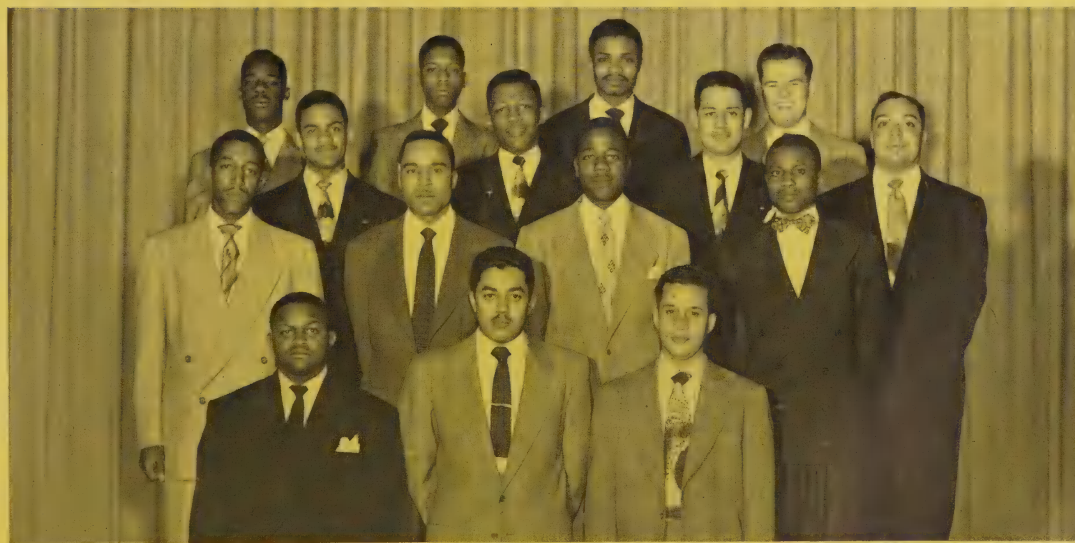

On November 19th, the house met in the First Baptist Church to commemorate the 39th year of the fraternity. Here the four cardinal principles of Omega were stressed: uplift, manhood, scholarship, perseverance.

The year was brought to a close with Spring Revelry, the annual formal.

"Prima"—is the password at the "Country Club on the hill," as the Phi Delt house is called. This year the Indiana chapter has 101 years of proud past history.

In the typical language of the "boys," many Phis have been known "to lurk around" the Union Building and Y.M.C.A. offices furthering their extracurricular activities. The Phi Deltas have the president of Town Hall, three members of Union Board and four men on the Y.M.C.A. Council and Cabinet.

Within the house itself there are many activities which take up much of brothers' time. Back in 1946, an award was given to one of the Phis for showing the greatest lack of co-ordination (physical). Soon thereafter, the award was named the "Ballard Memorial Trophy" in his behalf. It has been presented numerous times this year to brothers who show the same shortcomings.

The dance of the year was "The Beachcomber's Ball." A trophy was again awarded to the girl wearing the most appropriate costume. In the spring a Soap Box Derby was staged on Phi Delt hill. The winner was kissed by a queen, after being given the checkered flag by one of the popular race drivers in the 500 Mile Memorial Day Classic at Indianapolis.

Phi Gamma Delta, here we are! . . . standing in the shining glory of a Fiji smoke dream come true after five years of waiting. The construction workers moved out, and the Phi Gams proudly moved into their new wing—a fire-proof construction containing thirteen new study rooms, a dining room, kitchen—and a new sun porch with a beautiful game room beneath it.

Highlighting the Fiji social season were the "Jeff Hop," an annual dance given in connection with the Phi Psi's; "Norris Pig Dinner," honoring the newly initiated Class of 1954; and the annual "Fiji Island Dance," a gala costume affair patterned after life in the Pacific Ocean Fiji Isles.

Activities at Phi Gamma Delta are growing—this year they could boast of having the president of Interfraternity Council, the business manager of the Arbutus, and the president of Falcon Club. They also have one position on the Board of Aeons along with four members in the Indiana University Blue Key Chapter.

"Wow — what a game!" and "Anybody want some popcorn?" were heard every evening at the Phi Kappa House. A television set was given to the Alpha Alpha Chapter of the Phi Kappas here on campus, so no one studied! Two Phi Kappas ran a post exchange for their fraternity brothers. If anyone wanted candy, cokes, or popcorn, the two Phi Kaps got it for him.

In other activities, one Phi Kappa held the position of editor of the Crimson Bull, and another was presented the Balfour plaque last year.

Have you ever heard of Pledger? This is the collie mascot presented by last year's pledge class. Officially he's registered as Herman Lode-stone Wells.

The Lamp-lighter's Ball, the annual formal dance, was given in the spring. This year for the first time the Phi Kappas also had a formal dance in the fall.

Sun bathing on our sun deck helped us to become physically fit enough to win the Intramural Trophy last year. The award was made for athletics and other forms of physical activity which included watching cars go by from a grandstand seat on the poop deck in front of the house. As usual, a few of the guests entering the house for their first time were a little surprised when the smiling pledge greeted them and said, "Come on upstairs." It's all right, though, because the main lounges are on the second floor.

As to individual activities, a Union Board member and a Y.M.C.A. Cabinet member were among some of the rods who lived in the Phi Psi house last year.

A number of social events and activities were held with our loving sister sorority across the street, the girls of Kappa Kappa Gamma. A first place in booth decoration for the Fall Carnival netted us a trophy to share with the Kappas. The big social deals of the year were the Jeff Hop in January and the Arabian Nights' dance in the spring.

The home of the Phi Kappa Taus on North Walnut Street is a landmark in Bloomington which was formerly known as the Showers' Mansion. When important guests visit the house, the men like to make use of the servant bell system that was installed years ago. It makes quite an impression!

Last year, as in the two previous years that we have been on campus, Phi Kappa Tau chapters from the University of Illinois, Miami University, University of Louisville, and Purdue University came for a stag picnic. As usual, several contests were held, athletic and otherwise.

Last fall, there was the annual Booty Ball, and this Spring, the Sweetheart Formal, the Founder's Day banquet and dance were held.

Some campus rods who make the long trip from North Walnut to the campus every day are the treasurer of the Blue Key, Board of Aeons member and Student Supreme Court justice, and a member of the Campus Social Coordination Committee.

Everyone at our house did something to help keep up the grade average, even the cook. During the dreaded times of mid terms and finals, the cook served brain sandwiches. It was hoped that the effect would show up in the house average at the end of the semester. Since we didn't have brain sandwiches all the time, we had a little device to help pledges improve their table manners. It was what we called a "pig" table once a week at dinner. You can guess what pledges we made eat there.

We had another Housemother's Dinner last year. At this affair, we were dates for the housemothers at a formal dinner, complete with corsages and entertainment.

We remodeled the house last fall making the garage into a dining room and the coal bin into a shower. From the dining room windows we could keep an eye on the first president of the University who lives next door. We liked to watch the annual pilgrimage and lawn parties from our front row seats.

Among our campus personalities there were the art editor of the Crimson Bull, the vice-president of the Intrafraternity Council, the president of Psi Chi, and the president of Kappa Kappa Psi.

While many other fraternities on campus were concerned this year with the building of houses, the men of Pi Kappa Alpha were concerned with building a strong chapter.

Chartered only since February of 1950, the Indiana University chapter has had the problems of newness to solve. Early emphasis was placed upon redecoration of the house and the rushing of men who had vision. Later in the year the men of Delta Chi Chapter settled down to build their traditions and their reputation on campus in keeping with their fraternity's high national ranking.

In the spring the Pikes staged their first annual Dream Girl Dance based upon their famous song, "The Dream Girl of Pi K A." Other traditions were formed or continued from their first year of organization.

Delta Chi of Pi Kappa Alpha met its second year with determination. The Garnet and Gold prospered in 1950 and its men are confident its formative stage has passed.

From the time of Pi Kappa Phi's inception our fraternity has been constantly building and strengthening the program until now we have one of the biggest little houses on campus. Although small numerically, the high caliber of the members has advanced Pi Kappa Phi to the fore in campus recognition.

Pi Kapps are frequently mentioned in regard to campus activities. We had among our members the student house manager of the Auditorium, and manager of the Concert Choir; and chairman of the Sphinx Table Waiters' Ball.

The pledge-active football and basketball games were two of the highlights of the sporting season at the Pi Kapp house. This year, the pledges and actives were locked in mortal combat on the gridiron and net court, but the pledge team won. A turnabout day was declared when pledges assumed the roles of actives. The upperclassmen are still looking for their first victory in this series.

Pi Lambda Phi is now in its twenty-third year on the Indiana University campus. It was founded here in 1928 by a group of 25 men who had an urge to develop the higher ideals of conduct and to promote a close fraternal bond by means of carefully selected associates.

Alpha Theta chapter had a very active social program during the entire year. This program was highlighted by the Initiation Ball, held at Skyland Lodge. Annual events of Pi Lambda Phi included the Senior Banquet, the Wharf Dance, the Homecoming Dance, and the open houses for both organized and independent students.

The Pi Lams are well represented in campus activities. The Pi Lams were also represented in the three organized honoraries — Skull and Crescent, Falcon, and the Sphinx Club. Pi Lambda Phi was also represented in such organizations as the Pershing Rifles, the Scabbard and Blade. They also placed first in the campus bridge tournament.

The social season got off to a Grecian start with the pledge dance, the Olympus Orgy. Many would-be Greek gods danced with their goddesses. Then there was the annual Apple-Polishers Banquet. The S.A.E.s brought their favorite pros over for dinner to be dined and razzed. To get a glimpse of foreign customs and thoughts, the S.A.E.s invited all the foreign students on campus to a tea. Then in the spring came the long-awaited, infamous Gypsy Dance where large gold earrings and loud scarfs were the order of the day.

The social functions didn't interfere with the campus activities. S.A.E.s were to be seen in many key campus positions such as: president of Sphinx Club, president of the Board of Honoraries, vice-president of the Board of Aeons, president of the senior class, president of Blue Key, head of the cheerleaders, and vice-president of Union Board.

During the past year, the men of Sigma Alpha Mu took up babysitting as a service to the distraught women of Bloomington. They had the idea of service in mind and also hopes of dragging in a few shekels. The Sammies were given lectures at their house by an instructor of home economics. They also attended some of the regular child-care classes where they were shown some of the finer points of diaper changing and other baby-tending techniques. Finally, after much preparation they sat with real babies — the one-to-ten-year-old kind.

Some of the Sammies held important positions on campus. There was the publicity director of the Union Board, promotion manager of the Crimson Bull, assistant circulation manager of the Arbutus, and an associate editor of the Crimson Bull.

On nights when they weren't baby-sitting, or maintaining one of the highest scholastic averages of the fraternities on campus, the men of Sigma Alpha Mu threw a number of parties. Besides three annual affairs, the Pajama Party, Sweetheart Formal, and Pledge Formal, they had square dances, costume parties, and open houses.

Watermelon seeds, crowds of students and faculty, street dancing, and more watermelon seeds is a sure indication that school has begun at Indiana University; for at the beginning of each school year, Sigma Chi Fraternity plays host to Indiana University at their traditional Melon Mess. Everyone plays but the pledges.

On campus in both sports and activities the Sigma Chis were well represented. The circulation manager of the Arbutus, the managing editor of The Pin, and co-captain of the track squad were all Sigs.

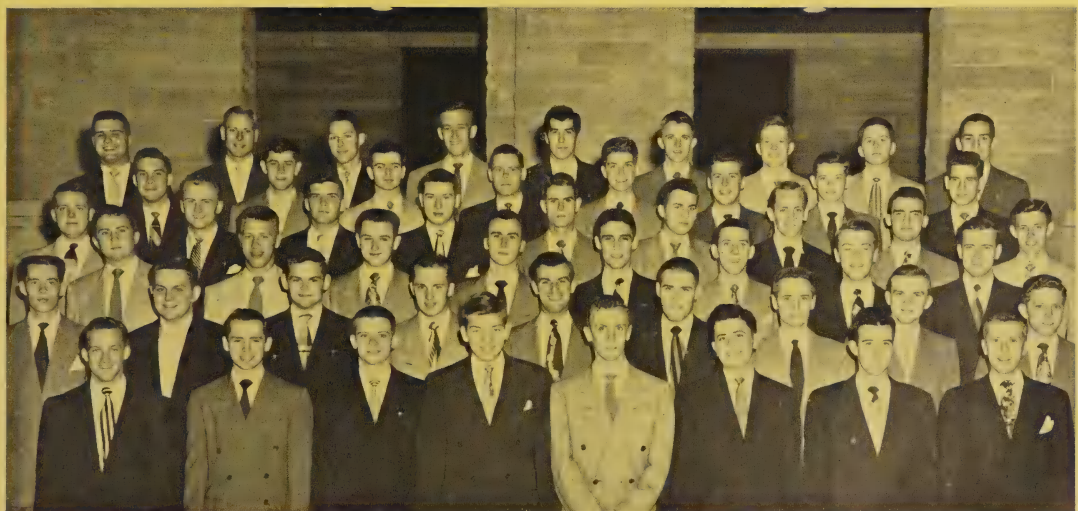

"It's time for a change" is the byword at the Sigma Chi house. The Sigs have adopted an innovation for their serenades, the presentation of a white rose corsage to the girl as the chapter sings "White Rose of Sigma Chi." Also, Lambda Chapter is anticipating a new house in the very near future, and the newly formed Dad's Club is working to help the Sigs make this a reality.

Some traditions must stand, however, like the senior couch, picnics, the song, "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," the Miami Triad, the Harvest Moon Hoedown, and, of course, the Sweetheart Dance during which the Sweetheart of Sigma Chi is crowned.

There were plenty of opportunities for the Sigma Nus to try out the latest dance steps. They started things off with their annual Bar Room Brawl, given by the pledges for the actives. Next they joined the ATOs for their traditional V.M.I. formal in Alumni Hall. The social season came to a colorful close with the Ubangi Prom featuring exotic costumes of all shapes, sizes, and descriptions.

We found a new way to choose the queen of the ball last December when we had our Queen of Hearts dance. Every girl who had a date with a Sig Ep that night was a candidate for the honor. It turned out that the task of choosing a winner was too great for the judges, so they solved the problem by crowning each girl queen and giving her a trophy. Other big affairs besides the two pledge dances were the Anniversary Ball in March and an Apache dance, which is now an annual affair.

Also found last year was a new way to go crazy on Saturday afternoons during the fall. The way? — why, watching one football game on television and listening to another on the radio.

Then there was Hey-U, our Doberman mascot, either soaking up sunshine on the Union Building steps or mooching in the Commons.

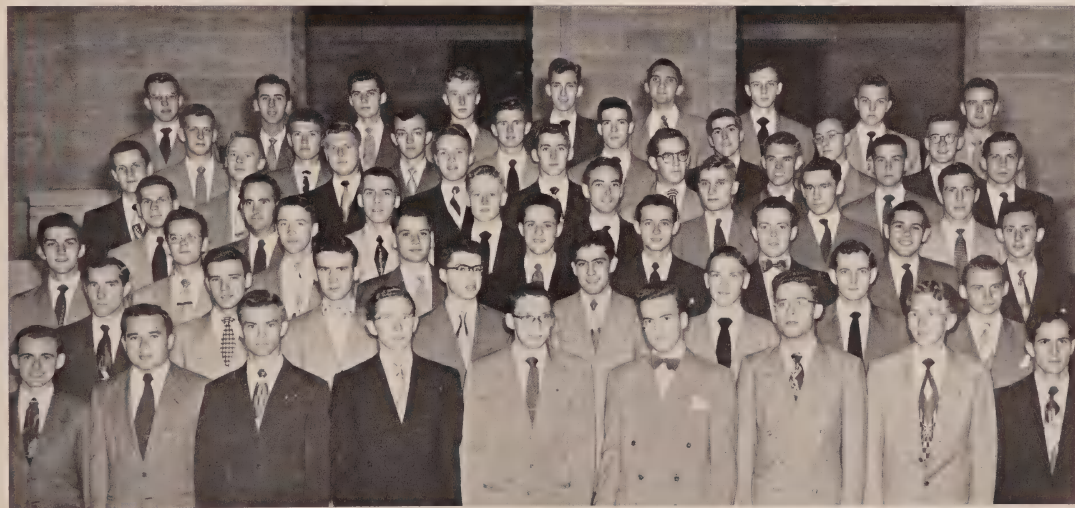

As to the men who carried around multi keys, there was an executive council member of the Young Republicans Club, the secretary of Delta Sigma Pi, and the secretary of Alpha Kappa Psi.

Most of our traditions are built around the Jordan River since we are just across the street from it. If the pledges or sophomores impart too much saucy language, the Jordan affords an efficient cooling place. Even an active may occasionally find his way to the Jordan.

We will long remember our dances — the one in the fall — and the Spider McGoon dance in the spring. We even managed to sing "You Are My Sig Pi Girl" while our girls were in bug costumes.

Each semester we had a pledge-active athletic event. Remember who bought the beer, and who went after it? That dark-green, rainbow-colored, '31 Chevy was certainly pushed around. The boys who owned the other cars in the house were always around to help out too.

Maybe it's because of their interest in the girls' physical education classes on Jordan Field or for the general boress, but we'll all miss the seniors.

The highest grades in the freshman class — it's for this achievement that Tau Kappa Epsilon is proud of one of its pledges who was awarded the Phi Beta Kappa scholarship.

And then there was the pledge who was jokingly sent to paint another fraternity's porch by his older brothers. The actives anxiously awaited his return for an hour and a half. By an accidental discovery, he was found in his sack blissfully sleeping.

Oh, yes, a warning. The Tekes decided to do it up fine. After having three signs stolen, or "borrowed," they came to the conclusion to give the next ambitious soul a "large charge" of 110 volts.

It's safe to go to a meal at the Teke house now. It was a hectic time there for a month when the meals had to be eaten off study tables. The dining-room furniture finally came.

This is the Tekes' first active year on campus. They have organized their chapter this past year to the advantage of those who will follow.

We Theta Chis paused a moment at the beginning of school to pay tribute to dear Boozer. He had entered boxer heaven in the middle of the summer. Some unkind farmer's buckshot was believed to have started Boozer on his way.

With a fresh coat of paint on our house and a big "yippee" we began the social season with a well-received square dance. In the spring the dreamy music from our formal dance drifted along Jordan. The Dream Girl of Theta Chi accepted her bouquet of roses and began her year's reign. We had our exchange dinners, contributed to University Sing and went to the usual tea dances.

Few of us will forget military for some time to come. The president of Scabbard and Blade wears the pin of Theta Chi. We seniors offered our last good-byes and drank our toast at the final event of the year—the Senior Banquet.

It was a great day at our house when several of the chapter's brothers returned from Purdue with Holcomb, the Purdue chapter's duck. We believe that he was much happier here at IU than at Purdue because as everyone knows the weather here is more suitable for ducks.

We started a good will policy last year by hiring two Korean brothers and a German exchange student to work in the kitchen and do general work around the house. Besides helping them to put themselves through school, we felt that by working at the house they would have a better understanding of the American way when they return to their home countries.

Our big social event of the year was the traditional Installation Ball. This commemorates the founding of our chapter on the IU campus four years ago. The pledge dance and our bi-annual Blue Moon Ball were also big affairs that added to a successful year at Theta Xi.

When we came back to school last fall, our house had a new dining room and several new study rooms. Besides using the dining room to eat in, we staged dances there. The old dining room was converted into a chapter room. The new study rooms had accommodations for fifteen men, making it possible for a total of forty-five men to live in the house.

Being able to co-ordinate scholarship and fraternity life is becoming an annual accomplishment with us. For the second year now we have had in our possession the Sigma Chi Foundation Scholarship Trophy. This trophy is awarded to the fraternity maintaining the highest scholarship for one year. But we didn't spend all of our time trying to hang on to that trophy. There was the famous Gay Nineties Party, the beautiful Winter Wonderland formal, and the Spring Formal week end, honoring the eight founders of the fraternity.

Last year we had the president of Hillel Foundation and a circulation manager of the Daily Student living with us. In intramural sports, we copped the league championship in baseball.

The Men's Residence Center Association Executive Board is the co-ordinating board between the three men's residence centers: Rogers, New Men's Quad, and the M.R.C. It is composed of the president, vice-president, and secretary from the three residence centers.

The board's purpose is primarily of a policy-making and advisory nature.

The board offers men a chance to participate in a democratic form of government and encourages active interest in the housing units. Through The Corridor the board informs the men of its activities and problems.

The Governor's Banquet and Ball is one of the activities which the board sponsors. This is the night when the governors from the three housing units dine and dance their damsels. For the men who feel athletically inclined there is the annual Turkey Trot. This is a race from Rogers Center to the football practice field. To the winner goes a turkey and the last man receives an egg.

The Men's Residence Center Board of Governors is composed of fifteen men: ten governors, and five officers, including president, secretary, athletic co-ordinator, social co-ordinator, and business manager.

These men, assisted by the head counselor of M.R.C., control and govern North and South Cottage Grove in addition to North, South, and West Halls.

The board gives the housing units, represented by governors, a chance to compare ideas as well as sponsoring unified activities.

One of the social activities sponsored by the board was a dinner given the night of the Opening of Formal Season for the men of the center and their dates. The high light of the year for the Governors was the Governor's Banquet, followed by the Governor's Ball. There were also several functions given in conjunction with M.R.C.A.

The board is constantly striving to improve the dorms and create better relationship among the men living in them.

OFFICERS

Governor.....	Guy Pellegrinelli

Treasurer.....	Gene Carlisle
Social Chairman.....	Walter Florent

The Cavaliers of North Hall have in four short years become one of the most active and best-known dorms on campus by following their motto, "Spirit! Unity! Cooperation!" Its high rating may be directly attributed to the fifty-seven men living in North Hall A this last year.

Among the many activities this year, the beginning of the Cavalier Alumni Association played a leading role. Also the men have formed a choral group and a leadership program. Three dances were particularly outstanding, namely—The Turkey Trot given in November, the Christmas Dance, and the Easter Bunny Hop in the spring.

In addition to dorm activities, the Cavaliers made strong showings at all university-sponsored functions. They have been particularly prominent at pep rallies of which the high light was a ninety-two per cent turnout for the Marquette game rally.

Among the rods that the dorm claimed last year were the vice-president of the M.R.C. Board of Governors and the editor and business manager of The Shadow, the I.S.A. newspaper.

NORTH HALL BARONS

NORTH HALL FRIARS

OFFICERS

Governor.....	Ken McGill
Secretary.....	Keith Prichard
Treasurer.....	Robert Cook

The Barons of North Hall B were inspired this year in trying to make their dorm the best on campus. In consequence of this, a constitution was written and a pin was designed; thereby, an official club was organized with the intent of giving the independent men a closer sense of brotherhood.

In the political field, North Hall B had a very profitable year. The president of the Freshman Class, a director of the Sophomore Class, and two cheerleaders furthered the interests of the Barons in extracurricular activities.

Social events were also very important. In the fall, the season started with the Fall Picnic and was climaxed with the Christmas dance. All during the year, exchange dinners and dances played a large part in the social life of the dorm.

One of the most novel and important features of the dorm activities was its intramural and intradorm sports program. In the intradorm contests one floor played another for the championship in the various sports events which included basketball, baseball, and football.

The Friars, formerly men of North Hall C, were organized in the fall of 1946. Their emblem, a red cross and a gold sword mounted upon a red-and-black background, was designed after the crusade banners of medieval times.

There was a variety of personalities among the Friars. Seems as if the "Shutterbugs" got some kind of special enjoyment out of taking informal—very informal—pictures at unexpected times. Then, there were the muscle boys who flung around those bells like they were mere toys—so it was said. The counselor of the Friars was the one to draw attention, though. He was the storyteller. No picnic lacked a story from him.

The Friars strived for top athletic intramural teams. This was not their only interest. Being named after the scholars of medieval times, they tried for top grades. In activities the Friars had many men participating. Among these were two senators, the general council chairman of I.S.A., and the vice-president of Toastmasters Club.

Strains of the "Twelfth Street Rag" or "Good Night, Irene" could be heard almost any time throughout the year in West Hall III, for several of the Trojans had become masters of the ukulele. But, of course, not all of their time was consumed by this pastime. There were stag picnics, exchange dinners, and unit dances. Also, at Christmas time the Trojans gave their traditional Christmas party for underprivileged children.

In intramurals the men of West Hall III were quite active and even boasted the horse-shoe champion of the campus. The great sport of snowball fighting was not forgotten by the mighty Trojans. Several were scheduled with the gals from Smithwood to prove that the male is the stronger sex.

Five men from West Hall III were members of Tomahawk and one served as vice-president of that organization. All the Trojans agree that the year was jam-packed with fun for everyone.

Characteristic of Rogers Center Board of Governors, this year's board had a very successful year. Success held no bounds for the governors in coping with their many problems, achieving their goals, and coordinating the center into a well-knit unit.

The year was highlighted by the bringing home of the first-place trophy for homecoming decorations in the men's housing units, a successful continuation of the Rogers Rollicking Revue at the Fall Carnival, a Christmas dance, the Melody Mansion dance in the spring, and the largest attendance in the history of the Rogers Center boxing show.

The board carried on the work of their predecessors by helping to establish the new Rogers Center library. In the way of new facilities a recreational center was founded, offering the men relaxation through such pastimes as ping-pong and pool. The primary goal of the board is to continue improving the boys' "home away from home."

A mixer with Walnut, which was one of the first of the year, started our social activities. This mixer gave new freshmen a glance at social events. We had dorm picnics in the spring and fall and several dances during the year — the Thanksgiving dance combined with West V of Rogers — the Christmas formal with all of Rogers — and the lounge dances, especially at Halloween, with everyone tripping over cornstalks — all adding a bit of tang to well-blended activities.

We actively entered into intramurals — Ping-pong, wrestling, and, especially, basketball in which we had an exceptionally good team. We had two varsity football managers as well as several outstanding varsity football players and were also represented in varsity wrestling.

The hall was superabundantly represented with men in activities. We had the vice-presidents of Rogers Center and M.R.C.A., members of Beta Gamma Sigma, Alpha Kappa Psi, Flame Club, and Tomahawk.

The vice-president of the Freshman Class, who is from our hall, is an Englishman. Several other men from foreign countries including Iran, Egypt, and Australia live in Rogers R East.

The Monroe County Fish and Game Club was the setting for our first big party. Dressed in old clothes, we treated our dates to a picnic and dance at the club, and a good time was had by all. One Sunday night we splurged and had a wiener roast in the hall with all the boys attending.

In December we gave a Christmas party for underprivileged children in Bloomington. Santa Claus reigned over the festivities, and there were presents for everyone. Spring found us entertaining at a record dance. "Come as You Are" was the theme of the dance, and we were co-hosts with Rogers T East.

We cannot boast very many campus "rods," for our dorm is mainly freshmen. However, we are proud to have the president of the Board of Governors of the Men's Dorms, and six members of the football team claim Rogers T West as their dorm.

Memories of the intramural basketball championship won last spring started Rogers V West off to a fine year.

Corn shocks and pumpkins decorated the hall at our Halloween dance, which was our first social event of the year. Variety was the byword for the costumes, and all shapes and sorts were seen. We also had a Thanksgiving dance with Rogers V East and Rogers R East and West which took place in the dining hall.

A Christmas party for underprivileged children with gifts galore and a Santa Claus to regale the kiddies, was followed by a record dance.

We of Rogers V enliven the year with several traditions. One commands the governor of either West or East who is unfortunate enough to have the lowest turnout in class elections to partake of his dinner one evening without the use of his hands. Another annual custom is the Keg Bowl, a game played between East and West for a keg of beer!

The treasurer of the Men's Residence Center Association and a member of the Executive Board are the "rods" in our dorm.

The boys out in the East wing felt the effects of the draft early in the year when Uncle Sam called their social chairman into the service. As a result, the social calendar was bare for a short while, but things were back in full swing again soon with several exchange dinners and picnics scheduled.

Last fall on football week ends the boys displayed their school spirit as well as their artistic talents by painting appropriate cartoons on their large picture windows. These displays caught the eye of many passers-by out East Tenth Street way.

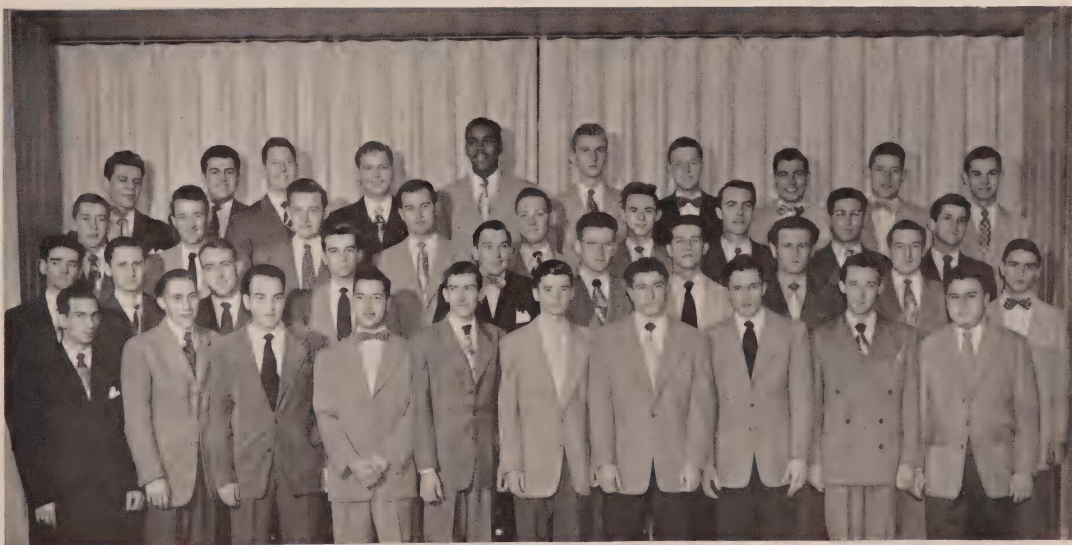

Rogers W East has a long list of men participating in campus activities. A few of the important positions held by W East men are: president of the Union Board, editor and associate editor of the Daily Student, and cartoonist for all campus publications.

"Plenty of spirit" is the best way to describe life out in the "Flying W." The boys have not only given their unit this name but they have also written a theme song titled "The Flying W." They want to sing her praises loudly enough so that the whole campus will sit up and take notice.

The spirit of these men is shown by their great success in intramurals as well as in outside campus activities. They were represented by a top-notch football team last fall and were right there with a high-spirited team for all other intramural sports. The "Flying W" also has a long list of athletes representing the university. The president of the Dolphin Club, president of Hoosier Boosters in Rogers Center and athletic coordinator of the center are several positions held by "W" men.

One of the most interesting of all the dormitories for men is South Cottage Grove. It houses 75 single men of various nationalities. The men think of their dorm as "the little U.N." with the following countries represented; India, China, Africa, Korea, Greece, Jamaica, Palestine, and the United States.

Many informal discussions on world affairs keyed the dorm activities, and with such discussions there grew a spirit of comradeship and a broader appreciation of the opinions of others.

The dorm was well represented in the following intramural athletics: touch football, basketball, handball, Ping-pong, and cricket.

Most of the schools of the University are represented in this housing unit. Scholastically, the most outstanding student at South Cottage is Andrew Spencer, a medical student. During the fall semester he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

"The busiest dorm on campus" — that might well be the title given North Cottage Grove — home of the famous "vultures." North Cottage is the only men's cooperation housing unit on campus and is proudly cleaned and polished daily by its members — maid service is a thing unknown. In addition to keeping the dorm livable, most of its 50 inhabitants hold down outside jobs — then as a sideline they carry a full-time college program.

The "awk, awk" of the vultures heard during football season at every pep rally cheering the team on, was originated early in the school year at an evening's boress session. Originally planned as an intramural sports yell, it blossomed out quickly as a symbol of North Cottage Grove's unity and spirit, not only in intramural sports but in all activities until it finally became familiar throughout the campus.

In addition to its mighty enthusiasm, it has its share of sports stars: Dave Norton, and Jim Harper, both Big Ten leading contenders in the high jump, reside at North Cottage. Duane Gomes, intramural tennis champion, also calls North Cottage home.

The Board of Governors of the Men's New Halls has quite a job to handle in coordinating the activities of more than a thousand men living in the quad. The board, made up of representatives from each of the eighteen units, has several functions: they act as a governing body, they represent the men and voice their complaints to the administration, and they sponsor the functions in which the entire center participates.

Early in January, the annual dance given by the center was held in the main dining room. In the fall a record dance was given after the Marquette game, and several record and combo dances were given in the spring.

Several committees made up of board members were active during the year. The Recognition Committee awarded keys to outstanding men in campus activities. The Leadership Committee sponsored a conference and forum for men interested in becoming officers next year. In the fall the Hospitality Committee sponsored a series of eight speeches given in the main lounge by members of the faculty and administrative officials.

S. S. White Master Unit and Motor Chair are as modern as the present moment . . . will date your office with today and tomorrow . . . tell patients you are prepared and equipped to render the latest and best that dental science has to offer . . . make it easy for them to refer their friends.

CHOOSE White and you choose right

It has been truthfully said that the productive work of dentistry is conducted at the chair . . . that every needless move during an operation adds to lost time and profitless effort.

S. S. White equipment was conceived, designed, and built upon this simple and obvious premise . . . its accessories are always convenient and under perfect control for efficient operating; for example . . . the warm and cold air syringes, mirror, lamps, cauteries, low voltage instruments, sprays, X-ray illuminator, Bunsen burner, connection for pulp tester, call button, etc. are on the accessory table or arm . . . making finger-tip convenience a fact . . . because they are always close to the field of operation, whether you are beside or in back of the chair, without needless reaching or stretching.

Operate an S. S. White Motor Chair . . . elevate and lower it . . . test its perfect balance, simple, easy adjustability and positive locking . . . learn why it is so easy to work with it and around it.

Sit in it . . . the form-fitting seat and backrest will hold and support you . . . make you relax instinctively . . . prove that S. S. White Chairs are the most comfortable ever built for the dental operating room.

FREE Office Planning Service

Distributors of S. S. White Equipment will welcome the opportunity to help you find a location and plan an office . . . for city or suburban practice . . . in office building or bungalow . . . also suites for multiple practices . . . all without charge or obligation.

Easy-payment plans are also available . . . ask your local dealer or write direct.

Indiana Farm Bureau and Farm Bureau Insurance

PROTECT the basic business of farming, the farm family, and the farm home. This organization — like organizations in industry and labor — stands ready to champion its own cause, Equality for Agriculture. Farm Bureau policy comprehends the need for full cooperation among all groups.

FARM BUREAU Insurance companies provide protection against loss of property, lives, and health of Indiana farmers. Their policies are designed to meet the specialized needs of the farmer through Indiana's largest farm organization. Its agents and home office personnel are especially trained to give the best in insurance service.

The nation's farms are the nation's life blood.

Bright Future!

Although more than the usual number of uncertainties about the future appear to face young people these days, it is reassuring to know that one indispensable ingredient of every modern career is more capable than ever of helping you reach your goal. That ingredient is dependable electric power!

Indiana's power supply today is twice as great as it was in 1940. By the end of 1953 another 600 thousand kilowatts will have been added . . . to serve YOU. Yes, no matter what you do, electricity is keeping pace with your ambition . . . ready and waiting in homes, stores, industries and on Indiana farms to help you succeed!

"Thanks . . .

♦ ♦ ♦ to Mr. Henry Holmes Smith for his invaluable guidance, time, and facilities.

♦ ♦ ♦ to the entire Audio-visual Center for rush jobs, top quality, and unbelievable patience.

♦ ♦ ♦ for the assistance and guidance of our advisor, Mr. Earl M. Hoff, when the going was really tough.

♦ ♦ ♦ to George Disborough for his expressive division pages, and again to George, Jack Welpott, and Paul Rouse for a Beauty Section beyond compare.

♦ ♦ ♦ for the do's and don't's of Mr. Ralph M. Cronin, Keller-Crescent Co. — our publisher.

♦ ♦ ♦ to Miss Zelpha Morrison, of Keller-Crescent, for her checks and double-checks, questions and answers.

♦ ♦ ♦ Mr. V. T. Montague, Kingsport Press, for the first full-color cover ever to bind an Arbutus — a beautiful job, indeed.

♦ ♦ ♦ go to the Art Center's Messrs. George Rickey and William Bagnall for stimulating interest in our cover.

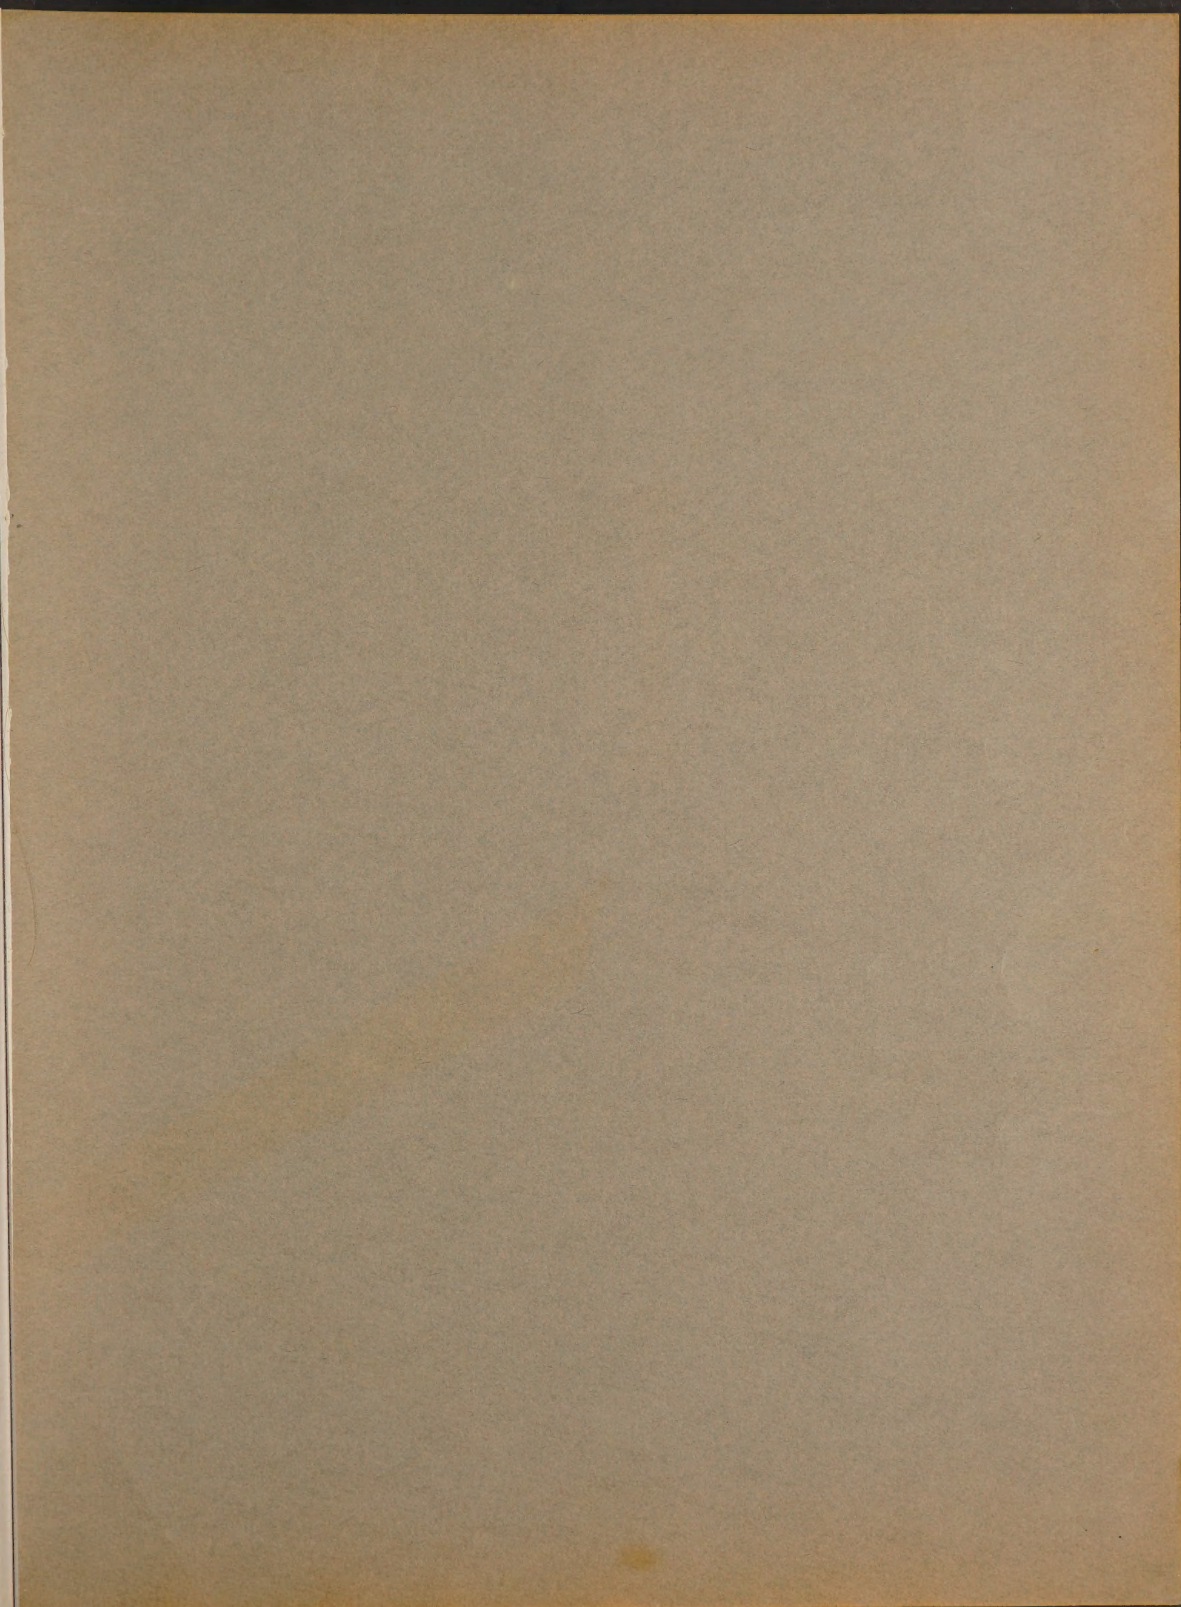

♦ ♦ ♦ to Miss Mary Lou Hahn for a superb job of creating our cover design.

♦ ♦ ♦ for our Senior pictures, Mr. Gerry Carlon, of Dexheimer-Carlon Studios.

♦ ♦ ♦ to all of the hundreds of students, merchants, faculty members, and administrative officials who have assisted in the production of the 1951 Arbutus.
